Armistice Silences Guns in France, Hitler Turns Toward Britain

Drive on England 'Will Be Like Nothing the World Has Ever Seen'

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Tuesday), June 25.—The ruffle of drums and the triumphant blare of a German bugle resounded around the world early today and then came the hoarse, historic command:

"Cease firing!"

Germany's war against France was ended with victory over her ancient foe.

Bells throughout Germany pealed out the tidings, their notes picked up by the radio network of all stations in Germany, and those of conquered Paris, Amsterdam, Warsaw, Copenhagen, Prague, Oslo and Brussels, as well as of the world.

Reich Turns to England

The strains of "Deutschland Uber Alles" and the "Horst Wessel" song filled the air.

It was 1:35 a. m., German time (6:35 p. m. Monday, E. S. T.).

A proclamation, filled with praise for Reichsfuehrer Hitler and declaring that the victory was one surpassing the highest expectations, was made in German and then in all other principal languages.

And then Germany was ready, single-minded, to turn all energies toward the remaining enemy—England—in an onslaught which, it was said, "will be like nothing the world has ever seen."

The announcement ceremonies were concluded with the fighting song:

"We Sail Against England."

Hitler Thanks God

Upon the announcement that France had agreed to armistice terms with Italy last night, and that the hostilities would cease six hours later as prescribed in the German terms to which France yielded Saturday, Hitler declared in a formal proclamation:

"German people: Your soldiers in barely six weeks in a heroic fight against a brave enemy have brought to an end the war in the west. Their deeds will go down in history as the most glorious victory of all times.

"In humility we thank God for his blessing.

"I order the display of flags in the Reich for 10 days and the ringing of bells for seven.

"Signed,

"Adolf Hitler."

He directed 100,000 Germans who had been removed from their homes

U. S. Sedition Case Jury Frees Nine, Disagrees on Five

New York, June 24 (AP).—The Federal Government's first mass sedition case in many years—an 11-week trial of 14 young men charged with conspiracy to overthrow the Government and to steal Federal property—ended late today with a jury acquitting nine defendants and disagreeing on the other five.

No indication was given by Federal officials immediately as to whether they would seek retrials for these five.

Scores of anxious relatives crowded into the courtroom to congratulate the defendants, whom J. Edgar Hoover, FBI chief, had accused when they were arrested in January of plotting to kill a dozen Congressmen and set up an anti-Semitic dictatorship in this country.

All except Alfred J. Quinlan were charged with both offenses; he was accused only of conspiracy to steal Government ammunition.

Guns Roar Again

Rumanian and Soviet Troops Reported Clashing on Frontier

100 Russian Planes Said to Be Making Reconnaissance Flights Over Bessarabia; Italian Troops Near Yugoslavian Border

By the Associated Press

Budapest, Hungary, June 24.—Foreign military and diplomatic quarters were informed late tonight from Bucharest that Rumanian and Russian troops have clashed along the Dniester River frontier.

More than 100 Russian planes were reported to have made reconnaissance flights over Bessarabia, the Rumanian province behind the Dniester.

[Rumanian officials in Bucharest refused to confirm or deny the reports.]

Earlier, reports from Zagreb, Yugoslavia, said Italian troops had arrived at Scutari, near the Yugoslav-Albanian frontier, the past three days and that Scutari had been declared a military zone.

Foreign observers here speculated whether there was any connection between the Russian and Italian moves. At any rate, this activity sharply awakened new concern over possible moves by the two powers to realize territorial ambitions in the Balkans.

Bessarabia for many years was Russian territory, but after the World War, when Russia became communistic, the territory voted through representatives to join Rumania.

Soviet Russia never has recognized the validity of the transfer of sovereignty.

Jews Lose Rights

Bucharest, June 24 (AP).—Rumania's 1,000,000 Jews automatically lose the right to hold public office, to serve as heads of private industries and in professional organizations under a new decree published today.

When King Carol's new Nazi-patterned totalitarian party was formed last week a royal decree was issued limiting all such posts to party members. Today's decree went further and forbids all Jews from joining the party, although other minorities will be admitted in special categories.

Beaten France Declares Day Of Mourning

Capital to Be Moved From Bordeaux Into Unoccupied Sector

By the Associated Press

Bordeaux (Tuesday), June 25.—Vanquished France officially laid down her shattered arms today, victim of the military might of Germany abetted by Italy.

General mourning was proclaimed throughout the heart-sick republic on this saddest day in its history.

The "cease-fire" order, for which the exhausted soldiers of France had waited in the last interminable six hours of sluggish but still deadly battle, came at 12:35 a. m. French time (6:35 p. m. Monday, E. S. T.).

France at last was at peace—an uneasy peace that found more than half her devastated soil occupied by the invaders, millions of her people homeless, untold numbers of her finest manhood dead or wounded, and her government a virtual prisoner surrounded by the victorious foe.

A more enduring peace must await the outcome of the continuing struggle between the axis powers and Great Britain.

(Apparently, all Frenchmen will not accept the bitter armistice.

("Shame and revulsion fill the hearts of good Frenchmen," declared Gen. Charles de Gaulle in a broadcast from London, where he formed a French National Commmittee to continue the war.

("France and the French people are delivered to the enemy, tied hand and foot . . . France is worthy of something better than the slavery accepted by the government of Bor-

Italy Begins Victory Parade In Nice, Savoy

Fascists Conclude Their Two-Week War In Triumphant Style

By the Associated Press

Rome (Tuesday), June 25.—Italy triumphantly ended her war with France today—just two weeks after Premier Mussolini plunged into the European conflict on the side of Adolf Hitler.

The armistice, terms of which were not made public at once, was signed yesterday at 7:15 p. m. (12:15 p. m., E. S. T.), 15 minutes under a full day after they were presented to the four French delegates who on Saturday had agreed to Hitler's terms in Compiegne Forest, France.

Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister and Mussolini's son-in-law, informed the German government of the signing 20 minutes later. As a consequence hostilities were to cease at 1:35 a. m. today (6:35 p. m., E. S. T., Monday), in accordance with the provision of the German-French terms that firing cease six hours after their notification of the conclusion of the Italo-French armistice.

[Italian forces under Crown Prince Umberto immediately began a "victory parade" into the Nice and Savoy sectors of France, the United Press said, quoting an official Italian dispatch from the Alpine frontier. This dispatch said Italian troops had crossed the border at three points and were "marching victoriously along the Riviera road."]

'War Is Not Yet Over'

Germans Bomb South England In Widest Raids of Conflict

By the Associated Press

London (Tuesday), June 25.—Waves of German bombers celebrated a victorious armistice with France today by flying over this island and setting sirens wailing in a wide area of England and in London and dropping bombs in many places.

Enemy planes dropped numerous bombs in southeast and southwest England, ranging as far as Wales and visited the west and northeast, but there was no sound of antiaircraft fire or of bombs dropping in London itself.

The throb of plane motors high above London was heard, however, and restless searchlights probed the skyline.

One plane was caught in the beam of a searchlight in London, but it was not known whether it was German or anglish.

There were no immediate reports of casualties or damage in the areas bombed, although several incendiary bombs were reported dropped in the southwest.

British fighter planes were active when three waves of German bombers flew at a great height over northeast England.

It was London's first real air raid alarm of the war, and sleepy citizens went streaming to air raid shelters and basements.

During the raid Royal Air Force bombers returning to their base (presumably from a raid on Germany almost ran into a large number of German aircraft. The British planes turned back toward the sea and reached home by another route.

The raids, widest in any one day since the war began, gave quick meaning to the hasty defense preparations of a Britain supported by

Torpedo Boat Deal Halted By Roosevelt

1917 Neutrality Act Forbids Transfer Of 20 War Craft, Jackson Rules

President Roosevelt late yesterday abruptly called off the proposed sale to Great Britain of 20 speedy torpedo boats being built for the United States Navy, when Attorney General Jackson ruled the deal was forbidden by a 1917 law.

The plan had been bitterly criticized by numerous Senators and House members. It was defended by Navy officials, on the ground that by permitting the British to obtain the new boats, the United States would have received, in deferred delivery, more efficient craft.

Earlier yesterday Secretary of the Navy Edison said "pressure" to sell 111 old destroyers had been successfully resisted, as had pressure to sell the Government armor plant at South Charleston, W. Va.

"We are keeping our combat ships," he said, while expressing gratification that the armor-building facilities also now are available.

White House Statement

A statement issued by the White House announced the decision to halt the torpedo boat sale. It said the Attorney General, in an informal opinion, had advised the President that "the sale and delivery of motor torpedo boats by an American builder to a belligerent government would seem to be prohibited by Section 3 of Title V of the Act of June 15, 1917," which provides:

"During a war in which the United States is a neutral nation it shall be unlawful to send out of the jurisdiction of the United States any vessel built . . . as a vessel of war . . . with any intent or under any agreement . . . that such vessel shall be delivered to a belligerent nation . . . or with the reasonable cause to believe that the said vessel shall or will be employed in the service of any such belligerent nation after its departure from the jurisdiction of the United States."

The national defense-foreign relations picture for the the day had these other bits of coloring:

Contracts for 68 Ships Ready

President Roosevelt signed the $222,718,717 War Department civil functions appropriation bill, which includes $15,000,000 for starting work on a third set of locks for the Panama Canal as an extra safety measure.

Charles Edison, resigned, gave up the post of Secretary of Navy after announcing that the Navy was prepared to let contracts for 68 ships, costing $750,000,000, immediately after the President signs the bill permitting the negotiating of contracts without competitive bidding.

Amid discussion of whether this Government would recognize the

Stray Bomb Found On Coach of Train From Washington

New York, June 24 (U.P.).—The mystery of an orphan aerial bomb claimed the attention of the police bomb squad tonight after it was found in a Pullman coach of a train which arrived at the Pennsylvania Station from Washington shortly after 6 p. m.

Whether the mysterious bomb, had a sinister meaning or simply was an example of the absent-mindedness of some inventor or government official was the problem police were trying to solve.

The bomb, about 18 inches long and 4 inches in diameter and containing 3 or 4 pounds of high explosive, had not been rendered harmless, police said. A passenger leaving the coach noticed a metal case on a seat and called a porter's attention to it.

Man Electrocuted Carrying Cable Across Wet Lawn

Henry Thomas Brothers, 23, of 722 North Wakefield street, Arlington, Va., was electrocuted yesterday while handling a metal covered cable with a floor-sanding machine.

Brothers was killed instantly while carrying the cable on his shoulder across a wet lawn in back of a new house at 935 South Twenty-sixth street, Arlington. The cable was connected to a plug in a garage on the property.

Brothers was employed by the Federal Floor & Tile Co., 907 Fifteenth street, Washington. Dr. W. C. Welburn, county coroner, called the death accidental.

Heat Fatal to One As Mercury Hits Year's High Here

An unidentified colored man was dead in Casualty Hospital last night after suffering heat prostration on Washington's hottest day of the year. The mercury climbed to 93 degrees at 3:40 p. m.

Fair and cooler weather will bring relief today, the Weather Bureau said. Lowest temperature yesterday was 71 at 1 a. m.

The heat victim was overcome at Brentwood road and Rhode Island avenue northeast. He was described as about 35 years old, weighing about 150 pounds. He was wearing hip boots.

Artis Mobley, colored, 27, of 622 B street southeast, was treated at Garfield Hospital for heat prostration and released. He was stricken while working as a carpenter

War Indicates End of World Near, Adventists Told

Predictions that the end of the world is near at hand are borne out by today's world conditions, Elder F. B Jensen, of Richmond, Va., told the biennial camp of the Potomac Conference, Seventh Day Adventists, at Takoma Park, Md., yesterday.

Everybody knows, Jensen said, that the Scriptures show judgment began 96 years ago and the Armageddon is due within 100 years from then.

It may come before 1944, or perhaps not until shortly after that, he said. The war, Jensen declared, is a portent of the imminent end.

U. S. Needs G. O. P. Victory For Security, Says Stassen; Stop-Willkie Drive Launched

'Lot of Spinach,' Candidate Comments After Move by 40 Members of House

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia, June 24.—A bloc of resentful Republicans in Congress set out to stop Wendell Willkie today, but on the basis of late returns from the Bellevue-Stratford lobby the Hoosier candidate was still going strong.

Forty G. O. P. members of the House, most of them from the West, got together in the Sylvania Hotel and organized what one of them called a counter-blitzkrieg against Willkie.

They issued a statement calling on the Republican National Convention to nominate for the Presidency a leader with a past record of consistent support of Republican policies and principles, and whose recognized position and recent pronouncements are a guarantee to the American people that he will not lead the people into a foreign war.

"Lot of Spinach" to Willkie

This was a crack at Willkie's conversion to Republicanism after supporting the New Deal in 1932 and at his foreign policy, which is too much like President Roosevelt's to suit some of the delegates. "It's a lot of spinach," remarked Willkie when he heard about the statement.

Some of those Republican members of Congress who didn't attend the meeting at the Sylvania agreed that it was spinach.

Willkie was too busy to say more, too busy holding levees for visiting delegations, too busy chalking up additions to his growing strength.

Willkie announced tonight that Gov. Ralph L. Carr of Colorado, leader of that State's delegation, would second his nomination and serve as a floor manager. This was taken to indicate that Willkie would get Colorado's 12 delegates on the first ballot.

Deal by Bridges Reported

There have been persistent reports that Senator Styles Bridges, of New Hampshire, would attempt to swing his delegates to Willkie in an effort to land the Vice Presidential nomination for himself.

Former President Herbert Hoover addresses the convention tomorrow, and it is apparent here tonight that many of his old lieutenants are hoping the oration will touch off a Hoover boom.

Women Share Convention Spotlight

Mrs. Longworth's Luncheon Resembles Movie Premiere

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia, June 24.—From the top of her chair in Convention Hall today a middle-aged Wyoming delegate in a cowgirl costume put on a gun-whirling act for the benefit of photographers—and about 15,000 other people.

At Independence Hall, where they tapped the Liberty Bell again this afternoon, a beauty expert with a Willkie button sat on the platform alongside the wife of a candidate.

In a downtown hotel, at about the same time, a blushing but determined Mrs. Wendell Willkie held a press conference.

All typify the feminine spirit of the Republican Convention. Mrs. Mary Muir with her gun, Elizabeth Arden with her carefully tilted hat, and tiny Mrs. Willkie are all a part of the cross-section of American women who still are pouring into town for the big 1940 show.

The party which Mrs. Alice Longworth gave this afternoon for Mrs. Robert A. Taft was a cross between a movie premiere with all celebrities announced over loudspeakers, and a Washington tea at which it is difficult to determine who is hostess.

Food gave out in the middle of a luncheon which Mrs. Worthington Scranton engineered for women delegates at the Academy of Music—but none seemed to care, and the luncheon went on without it.

Fashion note of the convention, but definitely, is red, white, and blue. Probably half the women are wearing the combination.

Four women had an opportunity to raise their voices officially at the opening session, when they presented minor motions to which there

G. O. P. Drafts Compromise Antiwar Plank

Allows Allied Aid If It Does Not Imperil U. S. Rearmament

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia, June 24.—A compromise foreign affairs plank that apparently is acceptable both to the isolationist and "help Great Britain" factions was being fitted tonight into a tentative Republican platform for dissection and debate by the resolutions committee tomorrow.

As it is now drafted, the plank—by far the most controversial of all points in the proposed platform—is understood to include:

Declaration of sympathy for all oppressed peoples and those fighting to preserve their liberty, and approval of aid to them if it does not violate international law and does not jeopardize this country's rearmament program.

Reaffirmation of the Monroe Doctrine with probably a reminder that that document urges both European noninterference on the American continent but also American noninterference in Europe.

Condemnation of President Roosevelt for his allegedly unwarranted and provocative statements on foreign affairs, and criticism of the inadequacy of present American armaments.

Urgent demand for a strong national defense program efficiently administered.

Emphatic opposition to American involvement in war; and

Reminder that the last war cost this Nation many "precious lives" and billions of dollars and failed to make the world safe for democracy, with possibly a comment that the United States is now "of age" and can preserve its own democracy despite events in Eu-

Cigars and Badges Abound

100,000 Jam Convention City With Carnival Paraphernalia

By Hedley Donovan

Philadelphia, June 24.—Twelve candidates, their assorted handlers and upward of 100,000 visiting convention fanciers own the town tonight.

From the Delaware River out to the 5-acre convention hall they are peeling cellophane off cigars, jamming into elevators, mislaying their elephant lapel badges and talking a highly specialized vocabulary.

The talk deals with booms, raids, reactions and movements to stop different people, mainly Wendell Willkie. Any reports of a "trend" are highly valued.

What looked like a gilt-edged trend was isolated at the opening session today when it was learned that more than a dozen Philadelphia plain-clothes men had disguised themselves with "Do It With Dewey" buttons before mingling among delegates and spectators.

Police officials, however, discouraged political analysts from brooding too long over the lapel display. Most of the plain-clothes men are carrying Taft, Willkie and Vandenberg badges in their pockets, it was explained, so that a quick change will make each of them one of the boys anywhere on the floor.

Lieut. Elmer Nesky, of the detective division, declined to be drawn into discussion of the officers' choice of insignia.

"Those boys are on their own," he said. "If they have to wear Dewey buttons to do the job, okay. If they have to wear green whiskers, okay."

Party Keynoter Charges Policy Of Roosevelt Has Failed

By Robert C. Albright,
Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia, June 24.—To a Republican convention showing life for the first time, Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota tonight flung a challenge for a four-way united advance on home security and hemisphere defense fronts.

A hall packed to its 15,000 capacity rang with Republican applause as the silken-voiced "keynoter," too young to be President, charged President Roosevelt with "failure" on all of these.

Delegates, weary following a dull opening day and footsore from chasing candidate rumors, sat silent as Stassen pledged Republican support to the President on all vital measures in a period of stress.

But they nearly brought down the rafters when he demanded election of new leaders and indicted the President for:

Allowing lagging national defenses to become "woefully weak."

Wielding in foreign affairs "a big noise and a little stick, and even that little stick 'on order.'"

Charges Waste

Scattering billions "to the winds" on the home front and leaving jobs and farm security still "on order."

Failing to rid public pay rolls of Communists, Nazis and Fascists.

"Putting the flanks of the Trojan horse."

Building up an undemocratic political machine, "to violate the third-term tradition."

To Stassen's repeated posing of the question:

"Dare this Nation continue for the next four years under such leadership?" the convention thundered "No."

The young Governor declared Republican leadership alone can defend this country against despotic and fifth column threats and world blackouts of peace.

Invoking the foreign policy of Theodore Roosevelt, he declared:

"We need again a calm, resolute voice and a big stick."

Then, 2,000 milling delegates and alternates returned to hotel lobbies and those "smoke filled rooms" to hear the latest war dispatches on Wendell L. Willkie's panzer assaults that were still cutting communications behind rival candidates lines.

Awaits Final Phrasing

A G. O. P. platform conflicting on no single point with Stassen's charted course for the party meanwhile awaited only final phrasing of a foreign affairs plank now adroitly compromised between extremes of isolation and war participation.

From the somber morning opening through the musical prelude leading up to Stassen's evening address the convention was pitched to a "faith of our fathers" overtone. Delegates sang "America" as the business meeting opened and "Ballad for Americans" as sung by Ray Middleton soothed the crowded hall into a mood for the "keynote."

Stassen carried forward the pitch, declared the founding fathers erected here "a great lighthouse of liberty" and called on American freemen to keep it burning brightly through "blackouts or dictators."

Appeals For Unity

He appealed for national unity through a world period of stress, called on Republicans to support the President "in every measure for the public good," but admonished

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Philadelphia, June 25.

11 STATES CAN NOMINATE HIM

If any one candidate could persuade just 11 of the 48 States that he's the man America needs, he'd win on the first ballot. His masterminds could stop sweating and straining. But they'd have to be the 11 most populous States.

* * * *

Harlan Miller

The big "if" recurs frequently. If, for example, any of the top G. O. P. candidates could swap a promise of a Cabinet post to each of the ten most populous States besides his own for its support, he'd have it in the bag.

Statisticians of the Gallup survey have projected the curve of Dewey and Willkie popularity with the voters on the basis of the last minute figures received in their Nation-wide poll.

I have learned on indisputable authority that their calculations showed Saturday that Willkie would pass Dewey "within the next six or eight days."

* * * *

This disclosure was made Sunday night. Dr. George Gallup has declined to issue these figures because he does not want to be put in the position of influencing the nomination at the eleventh hour.

On this basis, Willkie's rising popular support would pass the falling Dewey curve about next Saturday.

Over a few lemonades in one of the sunny, smokeless, well-ventilated corner suites here some of the boys were ciphering. With their pencils they had nominated each candidate in turn, but mostly their own. Then they fell to listing a few paradoxes of the American system.

* * * *

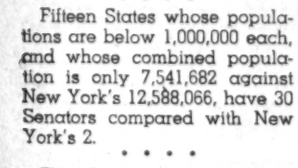
Here they are:

1. 11 States can nominate a G. O. P. President.

2. 12 States can nominate a Democratic President.

3. 12 States can elect a President.

4. 12,000,000 Americans can conceivably elect a President even if 35,000,000 vote for his opponent.



"—11 GOP States are enough."

5. 25 States with only one-sixth of the population can pass or block any legislation in the Senate.

6. Ten populous States can pass or block any bill in the House.

7. 180 delegates from a dozen States the Republicans can't possibly carry this year will decide the G. O. P. nomination here this week.

The 11 powerful States which can swing a nomination or an election are California, Illinois, Indiana, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Texas.

* * * *

To nominate a Republican, either North Carolina or Wisconsin will do instead of Texas, to make 502 delegates out of 1,003.

* * * *

To nominate a Democrat, the potent 11 need Georgia, North Carolina or Wisconsin, to make up 552 out of the 1,100 delegates.

* * * *

To elect a President, any one of the 37 other States must reinforce the potent 11, to produce 267 electoral votes out of the 531.

* * * *

Fifteen States whose populations are below 1,000,000 each, and whose combined population is only 7,541,682 against New York's 12,588,066, have 30 Senators compared with New York's 2.

* * * *

These States, with 10 other States whose populations are below 2,000,000 can theoretically elect with 11,714,478 votes 50 Senators who could outvote in the Senate the 46 Senators elected by approximately 50,000,000 voters.

"—12 Democratic States can decide"

Thus, it is theoretically conceivable that some day a President may sit in the White House who has received only one-fourth of the votes at a Presidential election.

* * * *

It isn't likely. But even the bare possibility agitates some statesmen enough so that they aim baleful glances at the moss-grown electoral college system and yearn to alter it.

* * * *

With these facts in mind, it is no wonder that the masterminds concentrate their wiles on the delegates and leaders from a dozen populous States, which still have more power than the vast open spaces.

* * * *

But there's nothing in these paradoxical calculations to prevent a diligent king-maker from staying up all night trying to corral the delegations from Arizona, Delaware, Nevada, Vermont and Wyoming, which have just six votes each in this convention.

Stassen's Text, Urging 'Rise Above Narrow Partisanship'

New Deal 'Just Patted Trojan Horse Flanks,' Convention Is Told

Text of the keynote address last night before the Republican National Convention at Philadelphia by Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota:

Our forefathers erected here a great lighthouse of liberty.

They showed a new way for men to live. At last men and women could stand erect. They were free—free to think for themselves, to speak and to work and to worship for themselves. Free to use their hands and their brains to build homes for themselves. And free to choose from among themselves their own rulers.

When those founders of our Nation met in the historic city, a century and a half ago, the dark shadow of despotic government covered most of the earth. The wealth, the traditions and the power of the Old World all were arrayed against them.

Yet they succeeded. The framework for a government of free men which they drafted here became a beacon of liberty and progress for the entire world. The people of 13 struggling States adopted their work, and made of it the living Constitution of these United States. The people took from their number a great leader and made of him, George Washington, their first President.

Their task was well done. Let us strive to do as well in this our time of crisis.

For once again the black shadow of despotism falls over the world. Fellow Republican delegates, even as we meet, lights are going out in Europe. Blackouts of dictators take the place of lighthouses of freemen. It is our grave responsibility to keep burning brightly the light of liberty.

If we meet that responsibility well, the people of this great Nation of 48 States will make the program and principles that we here set forth, their program and their principles next November.

Future of Nation Above All Other Considerations

If we meet the challenge before us, we will here nominate a man the people of these United States will make their President next November.

The challenge of the hour clearly calls for our Republican Party to rise above narrow partisanship. Ours is the high duty to place the future of this Nation above all other considerations, including our own desire to win.

Let us face, with calm courage, the task that is before us.

The press and the radio on this very day have brought to us added news of the horrors and tragedies of the war across the sea as ruthless rulers crush free men. Our Army chief of staff reports a tragic lack of preparedness for our own defense. All about us moves the discouraged evidence that we still have 10,000,000 unemployed men and women. A heavy blanket of $45,000,000,000 of indebtedness weighs down over all of our people. Back on the farms millions of rural families face their burdens with shrunken incomes.

This would indeed be a dark picture if we did not also see the great potentialities of a free people, talented sons and daughters of every nation in the world, having in their possession natural resources unequaled by any other nation.

It is for us realistically to take inventory, to draw heavily from the lessons of the past, and resolutely to turn our eyes to the future. Our first task is to cut through the clouds of confusion and of petty superficial political issues, and present to the people, crystal clear, the great underlying problems and principles upon which our real future progress must be made. We must brush aside the brambles of prejudice, bitterness, and hatred and lead through to national unity based upon understanding, tolerance and confidence.

Every citizen of this Nation, regardless of his station in life, his political party, his nationality background, his creed or his race, faces two great responsibilities during these next months.

Responsibilities Of Major Importance

First, he faces the responsibility of supporting his Government, as now constituted, in every measure for the public good. So long as the now President of these United States is in the White House, so long as the now Senators and Representatives are in the Capitol they are our President and our Congress, and when they together take action of vital public concern they are entitled to have and they will have the support of all men and women, including in full measure the support of the Republicans of this Nation.

But there is a second and even greater responsibility facing every man and woman of this country. That is the duty of deciding quietly and calmly who shall exercise the leadership of this Nation in the next four years of its existence. Then in keeping with that decision, each citizen should go to his ballot box next November and cast his precious vote.

These two responsibilities are both of major importance, and each is distinct and separate. He who would confuse them and would withhold support of such action now because of conviction that there should be a change in November is guilty of a disservice to the future of this country. And he who seeks to claim that support now must carry with it the surrender of the right to change in November is equally guilty of a disservice to the future of this Nation.

It is not a pleasant task to criticize those in positions of governmental authority. Yet it is absolutely essential to the functioning of democracy. It was not easy for the people of England to criticize their prewar government, yet how essential—in fact, how belated—was their change. It was not easy for the people of France to criticize their prewar government or their prewar generals yet how necessary and how fatally delayed was their change. When democracies face a crisis, their first step must be an extremely frank and fair analysis of their leadership as they prepare to meet their hours of peril.

I consider it to be the patriotic duty of my party to analyze frankly and fairly, from the facts and the records, the leadership this country now has, and that which it should have.

Last Refuge Of Democracy

Let nothing that this convention may do or say be construed or distorted by the enemies of democracies as a reflection upon our form of government. The constructive criticism in which we must indulge, the vigorous debate in which we propose to engage, the severe condemnation we intend deliberately to visit upon those who deserve it—these are not the signs that democracy is not working. They are the living evidence that here, in the last refuge of liberal government, democracy still is working.

As we face the future we see plainly that if this Nation is to fulfill its high destiny, if we are to make America strong, and our way of life secure, whether the next years be years of peace or conflict, we must advance with a decisive and determined step upon four major fronts:

The front of NATIONAL PREPAREDNESS.

The front of FIFTH COLUMN DEFENSE.

The front of GOVERNMENTAL EFFECTIVENESS AND INTEGRITY.

What shall be the salients of our advance? What shall be the character of our leadership? These are questions, the answer to which our Republican Party must suggest, and our people must decide.

Everyone recognizes the vital necessity for this Nation to advance rapidly and effectively upon the front of National Preparedness. We need more than millions of men and women willing to spring to the defense of the country. We need the physical and mechanical means of answering the challenge of those who seek to turn the great benefits of machine development into a mechanical Frankenstein of destruction.

We must develop our air force to take its place beside the Army and Navy. We need large quantites of the most modern aeroplanes and antiaircraft guns, the most modern tanks and antitank guns, the most modern ships and coast defense. We need highly mobile trained fighting units with bases for air, water and land defense strategically located in this hemisphere. These bases must be protected as far as the ingenuity of man can do so against destruction from the air. We must be constantly alert in research and invention of the means of defense against new weapons of aggression. To accomplish these ends, we must fully utilize our mass production system, we must marshal and conserve our great credit resources, we must have executive direction and responsibility, we must cut through red tape and bureaucratic delays.

Too Woefully Weak To Give Allies Aid

We must have a united people with each citizen willing to make sacrifices and ready to stand shoulder to shoulder in the interests of national defense. We need that pioneering spirit that characterized the days of the covered wagon.

And what shall be our leadership as we move forward upon this tremendous task? Shall it be that group of men who for seven years have been in complete charge of our Government using the Democratic label? Let us examine their record. For seven years they have had not only the Presidency and the Cabinet, but strong majorities in both houses of Congress. They have had complete authority and they must take full responsibility for what has happened so far as government is concerned during these past seven years.

During these seven years ruthless dictators in other lands built the diabolical machines of destruction now crushing Europe. During these seven years cruel acts of aggression occurred in rapid succession. With full knowledge of these dangerous developments what did our national leadership do to meet the threats?

It is a fact today, well known by the heads of every other government in the world, and belatedly coming to the knowledge of the people of this Nation, that we are tragically unprepared. We are too woefully weak to give the Allies that material assistance this Nation wants to give them. We are sadly wanting in the state of our defense of this hemisphere.

The Army chief of staff and the chief of the air force have testified to this serious lack of modern equipment for our defense. They have specifically stated that we lack almost entirely the mechanical means vital to our security.

As this news swept across the country, the President went on the radio and in an extremely clever, but dangerously deceptive manner, lumped together the equipment that was "on hand" and "on order" in an effort to smooth over the failure to fulfill the trust that the American people placed in his Administration. The cold facts are that in many instances the totals the President gave "on hand" and "on order" were about one-fifth "on hand" and four-fifths "on order" and those orders sadly delayed in their fulfillment.

Greatest Weakness Of This Administration

Even then he tried to give the American people the impression that they need not sacrifice, that they could move along with a shrug of the shoulders and that he would take care of things "on order."

He first placed some of the bungling members of his Administration in charge of the vital problem of production.

We can be thankful today that the overwhelming demand of the people drove him, begrudgingly, to turn some portions of the task over to tried and experienced men of industry who gladly stepped forward to aid their country. But he has still failed to put a single competent experienced man in charge of the entire job of production for defense. He insists upon maintaining an unwieldy board of seven with himself in charge. No man, fulfilling the responsibilities of the position of the Presidency, can in addition direct the diverse and highly important work of this committee.

This failure to understand executive responsibility and coordination, and the primary rules of production and of getting a job done, has been one of the greatest weaknesses of this Administration. It is a terrific indictment that for many crucial months the important War Department has been disrupted by a tragic conflict of authority, with a Secretary of War and an Assistant Secretary, hardly on speaking terms with one another, each conferring with the President, each playing his favorites within the department. And during the same crisis the Navy Department has been adrift without a real head, first headed by a man physically unable to carry on his task, and then by a Secretary who was submerged in a political campaign for the Governorship of one of our States.

By the politically timid appointment on the eve of this convention of two men of our party to these two Cabinet posts, the President made an eleventh hour confession of failure in his national defense aministration. We are pleased that the prospect of our convention caused this sudden improvement over New Deal incompetence, and it is only regrettable that we cannot change the entire Cabinet and the man who heads it with equal abrutness.

U. S. Training Camps Not the American Way

The most dangerous example of the wrong way to prepare was the startling proposal of the President last week that all boys and girls in this country between the ages of 18 and 20 be compelled by the Government to enter Federal training camps.

That was the method of Hitler and Mussolini and Stalin. It is not the American way. We need more skilled and trained mechanics and technicians, but the American way to get them is through the vocational training system of this country and through private industry. The Federal Government should furnish the funds for the immediate expansion of these skilled training and apprentice programs. We should repeal the restrictions that make it almost impossible for industry to train young men. This part of our preparedness program should be coordinated under the officers of the Army and Navy and directed by a man who has had practical experience in training skilled men. It should be kept away from the impractical dreamers.

Give our young men and our young women the chance to train themselves for the opportunities and duties that are opening up and you will not have to herd them by compulsion to a Government camp.

When we need more men in our armed forces, we should secure them in accordance with the program of the Army and Navy officials and we should not turn this task over to the New Deal social experimenters.

The President said these camps would teach discipline and keep these young people away from foreignisms. I would much rather trust our churches, our schools, and our homes to teach discipline and love of America than I would a compulsory Government camp.

Wasted Millions While Neglecting Defenses

Facing these facts dare this Nation continue for the next four years under such leadership? For too long a time industry has been hobbled by bureaucratic interference, and dreamy-eyed governmental delays at every turn while the Army and Navy plead in vain for the release of restrictions so they can speed up defense. They seriously disrupted and retarded the entire aircraft industry by the ill considered cancelation of the air mail contracts, and Army pilots crashed to the earth, just when every encouragement should have been given to build up our air industry. It is heardly believable but it is true that because of New Deal restrictions our aircraft manufacturers have turned to foreign financial centers speedily to secure new capital for plant expansion while idle capital and idle men are all about us.

For too long a time we have wasted millions and millions of dollars on "Passamaquoddies" and "Florida canals" while neglecting needed defenses.

For too long a time our leaders have strutted down the avenues of the world jauntily knocking chips off shoulders without even preparing to raise our arms in self-defense. For too long a time we have talked boldly of quarantining aggressors in order to protect other nations and now find we are not even prepared to protect ourselves. For too long a time our foreign policy has been one of a big noise and a little stick, and even that little stick "on order." We need again a calm, resolute voice and a big stick.

It is one of the primary challenges to the Republican Party today to furnish the leadership for the calm, determined, rapid advance of this Nation on the front of National Preparedness.

Our citizens also know that we must defend ourselves against the Fifth Column. They have heard and read the almost unbelievable stories of boring from within, of treachery and of treason in one nation after another. They have seen how this fifth column of traitors within has joined hands with enemies from without, to cause the speedy downfall and ruthless destruction of sturdy little nations. They have observed how men have taken advantage of the liberties of democracy to aid in cutting out the very heart of freedom itself.

Un-American Groups Must Be Exposed

We must prepare our defense against similar actions here, carefully and vigorously but without any ill-considered witch hunts. We should take determined steps through our democratic processes to keep these borers from within away from the pillars of our Capitol.

First and foremost there must be the determination that no one supporting communism, Nazism, Facism shall be permitted upon the public pay rolls of this Nation.

Second, we must encourage the great Trade Union movement manned as it is by loyal American citizens, to divest its organizations, in its own way, of all officers and organizers who are sympathetic to either Fascism, Communism or Nazism.

Third, we must unmask and expose those un-American organizations that are parading under false fronts.

Fourth, we must proceed vigorously to seek out and to punish by due process every violation of law committed by the fifth columnists.

And above all, by a sound and progressive advance, fair and friendly to labor, we must open new opportunities, correct maladjustments in our social and economic structure, and take away the grounds of discontent upon which these fifth columnists seek to flourish.

And to whom shall this Nation advancing upon this front look for leadership? To those now in charge of our Government? Certainly not. Under their leadership these past seven years we have seen manifold examples of fifth column activities in time of peace within this Nation. These subversive elements have incited hatred between groups of our people. They have thrown the first stone causing outbreaks of violence in labor disputes. They have split the ranks of organized labor. They have encouraged the destruction of agricultural products. They have advocated loose fiscal policies. They have stirred

Mary, Queen of Scots, challenged a multitude of living enemies and even in the face of death, would not swerve from her purpose. Her indomitable character, her friendliness, and her forthright nature inspired the makers of Highland Queen whisky to name it for her. For this whisky has character—it is a Scotch that is delicate and light, yet retaining rare flavor and bouquet.

G. O. P. Plans to Bar Delegates From Districts Failing to Poll 1,000 Votes

Rule Change Aims to Build Party in South

Would End Long Fight, Create Incentive to Get Out Ballots

By The Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 24.—A 25-year fight to "clean up" the Republican delegate situation in the South was all but won tonight by party leaders who declared their aim was to build up a "two party" system in Dixie.

By unanimous vote, the convention rules committee approved a recommendation that Congressional districts be denied delegates to future national conventions if they fail to poll 1,000 votes for Republican candidates in prior national and State elections.

Leaders predicted the convention would approve the restriction tomorrow despite estimates that the South might possibly lose 75 delegates by the conditional ban.

Sees Halt in "Buying"

One Southern committeeman said the change would prevent "buying" of delegates, a practice charged to Southern leaders in the past, while Arthur M. Curtis, Missouri committeeman, declared it represented "one of the finest things we have done."

"The obect," he said, "is to really build a Republican Party in the South and the time to do it is when our party is not in power and no delegates are involved in this convention."

It was explained that the rule would be an incentive to create real party strength by getting out the vote.

Under present rules, each Congressional district is allowed a delegate even if it casts no Republican votes in a preceding election, and an additional delegate if it casts 10,000 votes.

Also under existing rules, each State is permitted four delegates at large and a bonus of three more if it returns a majority for the Republican Presidential ticket. A change approved today would extend this bonus to off-year elections.

Receive Bonus

Only Maine and Vermont received this bonus at this convention, but under the proposed change the other 46 States would have a chance to get it at the 1944 convention of they returned Republican Governors or a majority of Republican Congressmen in the 1942 elections.

Another change approved for future conventions raised from two to three the number of delegates from Puerto Rico and the Philippines the same as now enjoyed by Alaska, Hawaii and the District of Columbia. The territories also were voted a bonus of two delegates if they elect Republican delegates to Congress.

Policeman Death Held Accidental

After nearly two weeks of investigation, Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, yesterday held accidental the death of Policeman Otho Blackwell, who was shot after killing Sergt. Charles F. Cummins June 12 at Twelfth Precinct Station. Blackwell had been transferred from scout car to foot duty for alleged neglect of duty.

Blackwell was shot to death with his own gun while grappling with Lieut. John R. Jeffries a few minutes after Cummins was killed. Dr. MacDonald held the character and location of the wound and absence of powder marks indicated Blackwell had not shot himself deliberately.

up and led relief demonstrations on full stomachs. They have sabotaged and stopped in many ways our great productive organization.

Sincere leaders of labor have made many protests. The clergy of our churches have sounded many alarms. Men of industry have made many pleas for help. Public-spirited men and women of all walks of life have cried out against them. Committees of Congress have brought out clear evidence of their activities.

And yet, so far as our present national leadership has been concerned, these cries have all been of no avail. In fact, as these protests arose, the New Dealers just smiled and reached over and patted the flanks of the Trojan horse.

New Dealers Patted Flanks of Trojan Horse

Members of the Democratic Party itself cried out against these subversive activities, only to find themselves derided and belittled from the highest places and to find directed at them a vicious purge, ruthlessly using all the peacetime weapons of a powerful administration in endeavoring to line them up against the wall for political oblivion.

No, the New Deal cannot lead our advance upon this front. It is a responsibility and a challenge to the Republican Party to furnish the leadership and the program to defend this Nation that we cherish against the borers from within.

What of our advance upon the front of domestic economic welfare? First, let us make clear the general features of his advance. No one shall suffer for want of food, shelter or clothing. The needs of that portion of our population who have no other means of livelihood shall be met by society as a whole acting through its government. But it must be equally clear that this is not the answer to our problem. After meeting the immediate need, the great challenge before the Nation shall be to furnish more real jobs for the unemployed in private industry. We must recognize that in a free economy, government in meeting the need of its people who are unemployed, is not solving a problem, but is only temporarily easing the consequences of an unsolved problem.

We must recognize that the answer to all of our problems of a domestic nature is not to shrug our shoulders and say "let the Government do it." The role of government must be that of an aid to private enterprise, and not a substitute for it. More and better jobs, better housing and improved living conditions, can best be secured through recognition of this principle.

There has been talk to the Nation of a more abundant life. In a vain attempt to secure it they have gone from a greedy contest over the division of past accumulations of production to an irresponsible squandering of mortgages on the future.

Those great revenues which our Government must raise, to be financially sound, should be raised in that manner which shall to the least degree restrict and hamper the flow of idle money into the creation of new products and new jobs for idle men. Incentive taxes must take the place of punitive taxes. We must exercise to the least possible degree the power of government, to meet definite abuses, rather than using abuses as an excess for the Government to reach out and grab all the power in the name of regulation. Those powers which government takes must be clearly divided as to legislative, executive and judicial. There is hardly any greater deterrent to private capital in its desire to develop more jobs, than the morass of uncertainty which arises when great autocratic powers to be, rule maker and investigator, witness and prosecutor, judge and jury are all lodged in the same bureaucratic hands.

For too long a time American enterprise has been subjected to the straffing of dive bombing demagogues.

To advance upon the domestic field we must unite our forces. The flames of industrial warfare, of strikes and lockouts and violence, have levied the staggering roll of 80 million days of labor in the past five years.

The loss doubled in 1939 over 1938.

Farmers Backbone Of America

The New Deal has helped to stoke these flames of industrial warfare. The present role of government in industrial disputes must be revised. Instead of cracking down here, there and everywhere, it should exercise as little arbitrary power as possible. Its chief aim should be to aid the working out of peaceful solutions of these difficulties around the conference table before they break out in strikes and lockouts. Placing in the hands of any governmental agency the power to decide who was wrong after the loss has occurred is not a solution.

We should draw lessons from the Railway Labor Act, adopted in 1926, which we in Minnesota have used as a model, with its waiting periods and emphasis upon conciliation before strikes and lockouts occur, and its protection of the basic rights of labor. These simple principles have met with marked success wherever used. They are in keeping with the fundamental principles of the relationship of a democratic government to a free economy.

We must recognize further on the domestic front that the farmers are the very backbone of America. We must raise their income and their buying power. The maintenance of millions of free farm families living on soil that they can call their own is one of the greatest bulwarks for future freedom. When, as now, with extremely low agricultural prices, the natural economic processes do not permit them to maintain their status on the farm they must be aided. This should be as a reward for their production of the food supplies for the Nation, and as an incentive to their conservation of the soil upon which they live.

The Challenge To Democracy

These aids again must not be looked upon as a solution to the agricultural problem, but only as a temporary expedient to ease the maladjustment that exists. We must seek real solutions in keeping with the natural economic forces that are involved in our system. We must step by step take out of production marginal land that it is economically unsound to cultivate and that only add to surpluses. We must increase the acreage in woodlots and timber tracts, we must aggressively market surplus at home and abroad. Millions of European refugees should be fed with our surplus agricultural products.

Through development of more jobs and more purchasing power for our consuming public, we must expand the domestic market. We must advance in research and discovery of new uses for agricultural products. We must furnish new jobs for the excess population upon our lands so that instead of being a burden upon agriculture they become production portions of our population and new units of consumption. We must preserve, as far as it is economically sound to do so, our own markets for our own farmers.

The tragic unemployment of the young men and young women of our Nation has been one of the very great losses of this depression. They have not wanted the dole. They have not wanted aimless month by month subsistence. They want opportunities to prepare for a life of productive activity.

The great productive processes of a free people under a system of individual enterprise have made this Nation the great power that it is. It has given to our people the highest standard of living in the world. This system has been and will be subject to its depressions and its recessions, its maladjustments and readjustments as the years roll by. We must recognize that government should furnish a cushion against the sharper fluctuations of this economic system, but that it cannot successfully furnish a bed upon which society can go to sleep. We must recognize that we gain together and we lose together. We must continuously work to readjust and correct injustices and inequalities that are present and that will arise. Then we can have faith that this system will rise again and make ever greater progress in the interests of all of our people.

For the advance on this domestic front, can we entrust the leadership to those who have been in charge for the last seven years? No. For seven years, jobs for the unemployed and parity for agriculture have been "on order". And tonight after billions of our substance have been scattered to the winds, jobs and parity are still not "on hand" but "on order".

Here again is a challenge to the Republican Party to furnish the leadership and the program for a sound, sincere, step by step advance in keeping with the great basic principles of American economy.

What of our fourth front? Events at home and abroad bring forcefully to our attention the challenge to democracy to make itself more efficient and effective without surrendering its own basic principles. The delays and confusion of yards and yards and yards of red tape, the waste and inefficiency of overlapping stumbling boards, bureaus, departments, divisions and agencies, the lack of effective lines of executive authority, the intermingling of powers that are legislative, executive and judicial and the proper performance of none, the incessant conflict between governments on different levels, federal, state and local, these are the things by which Lilliputians are restraining the slumbering giant of democracy and free enterprise and making him ineffective.

Government Sails Must Be Trimmed

The inefficiency of our Government is a travesty in a land that has developed such magnificent efficiency in private endeavor. There is a need of a sweeping, decisive reorganization of our Government. A real organization that streamlines our Government, simplifies our procedures, consolidates and eliminates useless and overlapping boards, bureaus and agencies, establishes simple and effective lines of executive responsibility and separates the powers that are legislative, executive and judicial. We need in public office servants of the people selected for their merit instead of corporals of a political army enlisted at a patronage pie counter.

Actual administrative details should be kept on as low a local level of government as possible. Relief, welfare and farm programs should be administered locally in the counties, towns, cities and villages. The State and Federal Government should exercise only general powers of supervision and audit of their expenditures. Needless governmental functions must be cast off. We must trim our sails for government action in keeping with the tempo of the times. This will not only save millions of dollars of needless expenditures, but it will build up the respect and confidence of the people for their Government and will give us a fair chance to keep our liberty and still compete in a world of totalitarian states.

Interests First Lie In This Hemisphere

To whom shall we trust the leadership on this front? Shall it be to those who have added almost 400,000 men and women to the public pay rolls of their political army, but have added only a few thousand to the pay rolls of our regular Army? Or to those who tried to pack the Supreme Court of the United States? No. The Republican Party must furnish the leadership and the program to give to this great democracy of our clear, decisive government.

As we advance upon these fronts many overshadowing problems of foreign policies will require decision. Let us frankly state to the people that we can neither fully anticipate these problems nor can we tie our hands before meeting them. As they are reached they must be faced and the people of this Nation must be made aware of what they mean, so that informed public opinion may find expression in the policies of the Government.

It is clear that the first responsibility must be the future welfare of the people of this Nation and their way of life, but it is also clear that future welfare cannot best be served by simply burying our heads in the sand. The world is constantly changing. Modern inventions, developments of communication and travel, the flow of trade in a highly industrialized world, all these increase the impact of what happens in one part of the world upon the rest of the world.

Let us determine and define where our interests lie. Clearly in the first instance they lie in this hemisphere. We cannot permit an armed force, aggressive in nature, with a philosophy foreign to ours to establish itself upon this hemisphere. Neither can we allow subversive elements linked to alien aggressors to undermine government anywhere on this hemisphere. It is essential that we plan in advance and take decisive steps to establish hemisphere defense.

It is a sad commentary that in the past seven years, which led right up to the outbreak of war, we have given the aid of our inventive genius, of our raw materials and of our productive ability to those with philosophies foreign to ours as well as to those with philosophies similar to ours. We have thus aided the manufacture of the implements of destruction that Russia used upon Finland, that Germany uses against the Allies, that Japan uses against China, that Italy uses against France. How belated is our now exclusive assistance to the Allies.

It is the responsibility of government in its foreign policy to endeavor in every honorable way to create and nurture a world environment in which its people can proceed along life's path in peace, expanding their material well-being and developing their way of life.

It is thus also clear that our interests lie with the encouragement of freedom and progress for all mankind and the development of order between nations based upon eternal rural and spiritual laws, rather than upon lawless force of economic strangulation. Failing in the creation of that environment it is the clear duty of government to make its people strong in their own defense, to so prepare them that other portions of the word may not stamp out their way of life, and may not encroach upon their well-being.

Shifting Policy Of the Politicians

Measured by these guides, what can our verdict be of the foreign policies of this Administration? We do not judge harshly and yet our judgment must be that it has failed. What has this Administration done to bring about a better world environment? Was it in its recognition of Russia? Was it in its torpedoeing of the London Economic Conference? Was it in its failure to advise the people of this Nation of the facts that it knew from the capitals of Europe? Was it in its announced attitude that this Nation was no longer dynamic, and that was not pressing forward upon new frontiers? Was it in its continued sales of the means of warfare to those very nations who threatened to be aggressors? No, nor was it in its appointment of wealthy playboys as foreign ministers and ambassadors.

Clearly failing in its first responsibility, neither did it meet its second duty of National Preparedness. This Nation has had the shifting foreign policy of the politicians, unwilling to present hard facts to the people of the Nation.

The great need for our future foreign policy is a leadership that is frank and fair with the people. The people must have confidence that their leaders place the Nation's welfare above their own political future. The people must know that their leaders while resolute in support of these basic policies, nevertheless have the earnest hope to keep this Nation out of war.

Leadership to Make America Strong

Have we been too harsh in our judgment? No, in fact, we have not even referred to the strong self indictment of the obvious effort to break down one of our bulwarks of freedom by violating the third term tradition. The saddest chapter of the last four years has been that the National Administration instead of keeping its eyes, statesmanlike, upon the welfare of the people of this Nation, has turned its political gaze upon a third term.

This un-American desire for a third term completely undermines their forthrightness in meeting all of our issues. It has destroyed statesmanship. Cleverly and surreptiously they have strengthened the iron handed control of the President over the Democratic Party. Building upon the corrupt political machines of Kelly and Nash and Hague and their kind, they have erected as a superstructure a political machine such as this country has never before seen. Democracy within the Democratic Party has been destroyed.

With this background they move on toward their convention, tossing aside the traditions of Washington and of Jefferson.

Let us fully recognize that this very situation is an added challenge to our party. With the Democratic Party's right of free choice of leadership denied to them, we must furnish the leadership for the men and women of all parties. To do so we must make our party truly representative of the people, independent of domination by any group, and fair to all.

Fellow delegates, if we could reverse the magic of radio tonight, if we could turn the millions of radio receiving sets throughout this land into microphones and if we could turn our microphone here in this great convention hall into a receiving set we would hear an overwhelming message sweeping in upon us. It would be a cry for a statesmanlike leadership to make America strong and our way of life secure. Shall we rise to meet this challenge? Let us proceed with our deliberations here in this historic city of Philadelphia.

Let us present to the people of this Nation a program worthy of their support. Let us nominate a man to carry out that program, a man the people will elect the next President of the United States.

Let us remember the words George Washington spoke in this very city: "If to please the people we offer what we ourselves disapprove, how can we afterwards defend our work. Let us raise a standard to which the wise and honest can repair. The event is in the hands of God."

G. O. P. Victory Vital to U. S., Says Stassen

President's Policy Has Failed, Party Keynoter Declares

that Republicans have the power to vote for new leaders and the President is not immune from constructive criticism.

On four fronts—national preparedness, fifth column defense, domestic economic welfare and Governmental effectiveness and integrity—he said President Roosevelt has failed and America with Republicans at the helm must advance "with a decisive and determined step."

He accused the Administration of wasting millions on "Passamaquoddies" and "Florida ship canals" while neglecting our Army, Navy and Air Force, and declared that only "begrudingly" had production of defense instruments been placed in the hands of "experienced men of industry."

Appointment of Col. Frank Knox and Henry L. Stimson to Navy and War posts he termed an "improvement over New Deal incompetents," and "regretted" the entire Cabinet and the man who heads it cannot be similarly changed. In contrast, he charged Mr. Roosevelt's proposal for compulsory Government service for youths a "dangerous example of the wrong way to prepare" and "the method of Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin."

He said exclusive American assistance to the Allies was "belated," and declared material aid leading up to the war's outbreak likewise had reached Russia, Germany, Japan and Italy.

While "jauntily knocking chips off shoulders," he charged this Government today is "too woefully weak to give the Allies that material assistance this Nation wants to give them."

To keep its own liberty and still compete in a world of totalitarian states, Stassen declared Ameria's first responsibility is the future welfare of its own citizens but these cannot be served "by simply burying our heads in the sand."

Urges Steps For Defense

Reaffirming Monroe Doctrine principles, he said this Nation's first interests lie in this hemisphere. He urged decisive steps for Western Hemisphere defense. Aggressors must not be allowed to establish themselves in this area, nor subversive aliens be permitted to undermine Government anywhere on this hemisphere.

Against fifth-column activities in this country, he proposed a five-point program, excluding Communists, Nazis and Fascists from public pay rolls, encouraging the trade union movement to rid itself of leaders so inclined, "unmasking" of un-American organizations, and prompt punishment of fifth-column law violations. Correction of "maladjustments" in our social and economic structure, he said, would take away the grounds of discontent on which they flourished.

To advance on the domestic front, he declared aid to the needy unemployed should be made a temporary solution, with emphasis on local Administration, and a speedy opening of jobs in private industry by ceasing "dive bombing" attacks on American enterprise. He urged less Government in business, incentive taxation rather than punitive and less exercise of Government power "in the name of regulation."

To solve labor strike problems, he recommended his own "Minnesota experience in following railway Labor Act formulas" with waiting periods and emphasis upon conciliation before strikes and lockouts occur.

On the farm front, Stassen said farmers must be aided as a reward for food production and as an incentive for soil conservation until a permanent solution can be found in bolstered home consumption, and surplus marketing abroad.

Hoover Will Speak

To maintain high'living standards in all classes, Stassen said, the Government should furnish a "cushion" against sharp fluctuation in the economic system, but "it cannot successfully furnish a bed upon which society can go to sleep."

Stassen, who will be of candidate age (he is now 33) when the next Republican convention rolls around will yield the rostrum tomorrow night to the only living former President—Herbert Hoover—who is still an active dark horse force in this convention.

Tomorrow will see another day of committee routine and not until Wednesday will delegates get around to the business they are here for—adopting a platform and nominating a candidate. Balloting will start tomorrow night or Thursday and will run through the rest of the week.

A Washington clergyman, the Rev. Albert McCartney, of the Covenant First Presbyterian Church said prayers at yesterday's opening session, and the night session was opened with prayer by His Emminence, Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, Archbishop of Philadelphia.

Mayor Robert E. Lamberton, of Philadelphia, a towering and powerful figure, welcomed delegates. He stressed the Republican complexion of his own State and city and grimly asserted that the Nation needs the G. O. P. today.

G. O. P. Drafts War Plank Compromise

All the proposed plans which have been drafted during the past week by subcommittees were read to the 53 members of the full resolutions committee at a brief executive session this afternoon. A tentative platform containing the various proposals is being nailed together overnight.

Herbert K. Hyde, of Oklahoma, isolationist, who was today elected permanent chairman of the resolutions committee, asserted that "an agreement satisfactory to all members of the committee" would be reached before the plank was brought to the convention floor.

In addition to the foreign affairs or "national defense" plank, two or three other draft proposals will be in the "highly debatable" class when they come up for committee consideration.

In this category are generally placed the planks on reciprocal trade, agriculture and labor.

The proposal of the subcommittee on tariff and reciprocal trade is understood to involve acceptance of the principle of reciprocity but indictment of the New Deal's method of making trade agreements.

On agriculture, the draft proposal is believed to include disapproval of control over crop production but at the same time indorsement—at least temporarily—of soil conservation payments. Instead of recommending parity payments based, as now, on farm prices for an arbitrarily selected period of time, the subcommittee is reported to have urged that farmers merely be granted a "fair profit" on their products.

The labor plank is expected to omit any mention of specific amendments to the Wagner Act, but to call, in general terms, for revision of the law to make it more "equable." Administrative reform is emphasized.

The money and banking plank is understood to denounce New Deal spending and to recommend that the President be deprived of his power to alter the value of the dollar.

Former Senator George Wharton Pepper heads the drafting subcommittee which is hammering out the draft platform that will be discussed by the full resolutions committee tomorrow. To the subcommittee yesterday were added the chairmen of all the other subcommittees and also Glenn Frank, chairman of the Republican program committee; Wayland Brooks, of Illinois, and Senators Thomas, of Idaho, and Lodge, of Massachusetts.

It is understood one reason for the addition of the two Senators was a complaint that insufficient attention has been paid the views of elected representatives of the party in Congress.

Pepper said three of the subcommittee draft planks were "highly debatable," but he refused to name them. He suggested to the Resolutions Committee that these issues be settled before the drafting group went to work on the platform, but the committee decided instead that a coherent—if tentative—platform be written before it begins to thrash out the controversial points at its meeting tomorrow.

Besides electing Hyde permanent chairman, the Resolutions Committee named O. Glenn Saxon, of Connecticut, permanent secretary. The committee itself was formally set up at the opening session of the convention this morning.

Gannett-for-President forces paraded three live elephants through midcity streets behind a 30-piece brass band.

But superstitious delegates rapped on wood when they heard that Lizzie, oldest elephant in the Philadelphia Zoo, had just died, at the age of 42. Then word came that another elephant had died in the Pittsburgh Zoo, making it look to some like a Democratic plot.

On the elephant front, interest focused on the mechanical G. O. P. mascot in the headquarters of Senator Taft. The Taft elephant, about one-third life size, has a three-gesture repertoire, all electrically powered. It lifts its trunk, flaps ears, and rolls realistically bloodshot eyes.

The spacious Taft headquarters in the Benjamin Franklin Hotel also is equipped with a pipe organ.

The Uncle Sam Marching Club, of Buffalo, N. Y., 80 strong and dressed in red, white and blue, kept turning up in the middle of streets and hotel lobbies. At regular intervals they gave three cheers for Dewey.

Inside the hall delegates apparently were saving their theatrical talents for Wednesday and the traditional outbursts which greet every nomination. A tendency to clap at the end of every sentence, first noted midway through Mayor Robert Lamberton's address of welcome, was the only playful development. A lone island of color was the Wyoming standard, manned by delegates in bandanas and 10-gallon hats.

Chairman John Hamilton, after two false starts, brought the convention to order at 11:38 a. m. At the request of press photographers he discarded a normal gavel for one of sledgehammer proportions.

Down town again after the brief morning session, delegates, reporters, school children, and potential Vice Presidents mingled along a six-block stretch of South Broad street, lined with flags and trumpeting elephant symbols.

Hotel lobbies were packed. In the Bellevue Stratford, headquarters of the Republican National Committee, delegates reported two minutes as good time for the 100-foot trip from front steps to elevator. A third minute had to be allowed for the run from lobby to bar, also a matter of 100 feet, according to veterans of the trip.

They were Mrs. Frank W. Warner, of Vermont; Mrs. George Spear, of Minnesota; Miss Jane Todd, of New York, and Mrs. Longworth.

Six feminine groups are lobbying for planks which they hope to see in the platform. The National League of Women Voters wants a clear statement of foreign policy, with intervention, regimentation and isolation defined.

Business and professional women want a "right to work" clause included and would like it broad enough to cover married women with jobs.

The Woman's Party, the International League for Peace and Freedom, and women investors want some assurance that the Republican Party will steer clear of war.

On the scene in abundance, but not working officially, are women fliers, who want a strong defense plank.

Most solemn part of the convention on its first day was the Liberty Bell ceremony at Independence Hall.

Eleven-year-old Margaretta Duane, a granddaughter of Benjamin Franklin—five times removed—gave the Liberty symbol 13 taps with a rubber-coated mallet, one tap for each original colony.

Former Senator Wharton Pepper, of Pennsylvania built his speech for the event around Franklin's statement following the constitutional convention. A woman from the waiting crowd rushed up to the patriarch after the session, Senator Pepper said, and asked:

"What kind of government do we have, a republic or a monarchy?"

To this Franklin replied:

"You have a republic, if you can keep it."

Republican Congressmen Launch Campaign to Stop Willkie

in the Hoover Administration, were said to be busy among anti-Willkie delegates, trying to drum up strength for "The Chief."

Tonight, John W. Haigis, Massachusetts leader, announced that after a first "favorite son" ballot for Representative Martin he would work for the nomination of Hoover.

"Commanding the respect and admiration of the great body of the American people, our former President towers above the bewildering scene about us—a rock of strength," Haigis, former State treasurer and G. O. P. gubernatorial candidate in Massachusetts, said.

Dewey's front appeared to be crumbling. His delegates for the most part, it appeared, might stay with him for one or two ballots but then break away.

In the afternoon Willkie made an audacious raid on the Texas delegation, a pillar in the delegate structure of Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio.

To the utter astonishment of Col. R. B. Creager, Republican National Committeeman for Texas, who has been boasting that he had the Lone Star delegation hog-tied for Taft, Willkie asked for permission to address the delegation. Of course, there was nothing to do but invite him.

The Hoosier go-getter didn't pick up any delegates—at least, any avowed ones. However, he did win a lot of admirers.

"Man, what a powerhouse," exclaimed one cattleman.

"Yeah, he's some man," said another, "but I still think we ought to nominate a Republican."

Prowling up and down before the Texans, waving a cigarette as he talked, the one-time amateur hobo, who rose to a $75,000 year job as a utilities president, talked about his boyhood in Indiana, about his days in France as an artillery officer, and about his rise in the legal profession.

Willkie said he was not ashamed of being a utilities executive and he told how he had increased consumption and reduced rates. Turning to the battle here, he said:

"You vote for the man you think can get up there and swap the best punches with that fellow Roosevelt. If you think Bob Taft can do it, vote for Taft; if you think Dewey can do it, vote for Dewey; if you think I can throw the best punches, vote for me."

Willkie told the Texans he was willing to answer any question put to him and he did.

"Is it true that you voted for Roosevelt in 1932?" he was asked.

"I did," he answered, "and for this reason. Back in to the 20's I thought concentrated power in Wall Street was becoming bad for the country. I thought the New Deal movement was a liberal crusade, and the first 100 days of the New Deal was the foundation of such a crusade.

"After that the New Deal was just a grab for power. They just transferred the concentrated power from Wall Stret to 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue."

The Texans gave Willkie a whooping ovation, and some of them waved their sombreros.

Thereafter Willkie spent the afternoon at his headquarters in the Benjamin Franklin Hotel, receiving a steady stream of delegates from all parts of the country.

Nobody seems to know how many delegates Willkie had lined up, certainly not Willkie. His strategy has been, of course, to make himself the second choice of the Dewey and Taft delegates, his theory being that neither of these front runners could win in the early balloting.

Dewey and Taft were insisting that their delegates would stay with them.

"I will have anywhere from 370 to 410 votes on the first ballot," Dewey told a press conference. "And I expect to be nominated on the second ballot."

The young man from Manhattan, Number 1 in the matter of delegates and Gallup Poll popularity, said he was so confident of victory that he was giving some thought to the choice of a running mate.

Senator Taft said he expected to have at least 290 votes on the second ballot and to continue piling them up until he got the 501 necessary to win.

So far as could be discerned, however, the only candidate who seemed to be making definite gains was Willkie. There was hardly a delegation in which there was not some Willkie sentiment. Even the Pennsylvania delegation, supposed to be a boss dominated aggregation, was beginning to show crevices.

Frank J. Harris, of Allegheny County, probably Pennsylvania's most important G. O. P. independent, said he expected at least 14 delegates from this State would "ultimately" be with Willkie.

Former Senator Daniel O. Hastings, of Delaware, called on Willkie and said afterward that the dynamic Hoosier had far more strength than most of the leaders realized.

The thing that the Willkie people have most feared is a "deal" between Dewey and Taft whereby they would pool their strength, with one of them agreeing to take the Vice Presidential nomination. However, there are serious doubts here as to whether either can swing his strength on such a deal.

Dewey was asked today whether he had considered a Dewey-Willkie ticket, and he pointed out that this would be impossible under the Constitution which says in effect that the President and Vice President must be from different States.

In that connection, the Willkie people were talking up a Taft-Willkie ticket.

For all Willkie's popularity, there continued to be a strong undercurrent of opposition to him, some of it pretty bitter. Republicans from the West, particularly from near the Canadian border, dislike him because of his friendliness for Secretary of State Hull's reciprocal trade pacts. Then there are those who are afraid of his connections with the utilities and who resent the high pressure tactics that are being used on behalf of Willkie by young Wall Street salesmen.

But the greatest prejudice that Willkie has to wear down is that growing out of his Democratic background.

"We welcome recruits from the other party," said one influential G. O. P. leader today, "but we like them to start out as privates, not generals."

U. S. May Take French Funds, Isles for Debt

Act Would Offset Loss of American Business in France

THE UNITED STATES is thinking about taking over French islands and French funds that are within reach in order to offset any American business losses in France and nonpayment of the French war debt.

This became known yesterday in double warnings from the White House and Treasury, apparently aimed at German troops of occupation.

The White House announced that hundreds of unofficial suggestions have been received that this Government take over French Western hemisphere possessions, now that Nazi occupation appears to have driven a final nail in the coffin of the defunct war debt account with France.

These suggestions have been referred to the State Department, which is studying them, Stephen T. Early, the President's secretary, said.

At the same time, Treasury Secretary Morgenthau disclosed that his aides are considering whether to take over French assets here in compensation for any property losses suffered by American business in France as a result of the German invasion and post-armistice occupation.

More than $1,000,000,000 in French assets here were "frozen"—or immobilized—by Treasury order last week.

IN CONSIDERING the proposed "offset" policy, the Treasury had in mind the fact that Americans have more than $350,000,000 tied up in France.

Included are $145,000,000 in direct investments, including automobile plants of the Ford Motor Co. and General Motors Corporation, which are in the German-occupied area. Other direct investments include distribution outlets and petroleum refineries.

In addition to that, Americans hold about $9,000,000 in French bonds and, according to Commerce Department figures dated February, there were $300,000,000 short-term American loans in France.

In general, Treasury studies were directed at keeping war loot that may fall into German hands from being profitably sold here.

"We will not pay out any French funds obtained under duress," Morgenthau said.

"We will make sure that payments go to their rightful owners."

Morgenthau said the Treasury also is studying methods to keep looted gold and silver out of this country. He had in mind reports that Germans were seizing silver plate and melting it down for sale in bar form in the United States. The Treasury, by statute, buys silver in the open market.

REFUSAL TO BUY the gold would mark a break with the Treasury policy of the past few years, which has been to pay $35 an ounce for gold from any source.

The French war debt, which might provide a pretext for acquiring French Guiana in South America and the French islands in the Caribbean and off Canada's coast, now amounts to more than $4,000,000,000 with accrued interest.

There would be no precedent in recent American history for taking over territory in payment of a defaulted debt, but for years there have been resolutions to this effect pending in Congress, sponsored notably by such legislators as Senator Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota.

Acquisition of the French property, strategists say would give the United States a stronger defensive position in the Caribbean and on the east coast of South America. In addition, this country would gain better control of the approaches to Canada from Iceland and western European points.

Britain, France Seek French Billion U.S. Holds

Two good friends and erstwhile Allies, the British and French Ambassadors to the United States, yesterday entered upon a diplomatic struggle with $1,000,000,000 at stake.

The sum is the estimated total of French assets in the United States, immobilized by Treasury Department order June 17 when France sued for peace.

The struggle may decide which French government the United States will recognize—that of Premier Marshal Petain in Bordeaux, or that of Gen. Charles de Gaulle, who has set up a French national council in London.

The British government's announcement that it could "no longer regard the Bordeaux government as the government of an independent country," and the withdrawal of the British Ambassador to France has convinced British aides here that England will recognize the national council as the legitimate French ministry.

This recognition, they said, will be the "legal instrument" that will permit the huge French colonial forces and the French navy to continue the war side by side with Britain.

Lord Lothian, Britain's envoy here, is seeking to persuade the United States to follow suit.

His antagonist is Count de Saint-Quentin, the French envoy, who told The Post yesterday there is no question but that the legitimate French government is the Bordeaux ministry appointed by President Lebrun.

The French Ambassador, a career diplomat who fought with British forces in Egypt in the World War, was closeted with Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles yesterday, but he would make no comment upon the discussion except to say he was received as the representative of the Bordeaux government, with which he is in constant communication.

Visible Corn Shows Gain

New York, June 24 (AP).—Visible supply of American grain showed the following changes from a week ago (in bushels): Wheat decreased 2,188,000; corn increased 1,392,000; oats decreased 263,000; rye increased 105,000; barley decreased 842,000.

Poilus Race Toward Africa To Fight On

By the Associated Press

Chancy, Swiss-French Frontier (Tuesday), June 25.—Down a 50-mile-wide corridor through Savoy, scattered French troops were reported racing for the Mediterranean today in the hope of finding transportation to North Africa to continue their fight against the Axis armies.

The cease firing order 35 minutes after midnight gave them their first chance to drop back from fighting lines and try the dash to the sea.

Until the last few hours of the battle of southeast France they were hard beset by Italian attacks through Alpine passes and by German mechanized columns from their north flank and rear.

Many Cease Before Order

To most of the hard-pressed moun garrisons near the Swiss-French frontier the cease firing order brought welcome relief after exhausting hours and days of unceasing attack.

Many surrounded garrisons, and their attackers, stopped fighting hours before the actual order.

There was no immediate word from the fiercely-defended fort, L'Ecluse, east of Bellegarde, where a large force of French Foreign Legionnaires held out grimly, day after day.

Peasants had said the defenders told them they would keep right on battling—armistice or no armistice.

Guns of the fort which held off a heavy German attack yesterday remained silent during the night.

Franco Closes French Border To Ex-Republican Refugees

By the Associated Press

San Sebastian, June 24.—Generalissimo Franco's border guards on the Pyrenees frontier are keeping the passes back to Spain closed tight to Spanish Republicans who fought fascism, then fled to France.

They intimated that such refugees no longer were considered Spanish and said they had no knowledge of them.

The human flow of statesmen, merchants and royalty continued through entry stations from France which stopped most of the steady stream of persons seeking refuge.

Difficulties in obtaining visas and a lack of gasoline and means of transportation added to the delays for those who sought entrauce The signing of the armistice, however, has decreased the number asking to cross the frontier.

With the co-operation of United States consular officials, the way was cleared for the first group of American newspaper correspondents to cross into Spain.

In the first group expected to arrive tonight were John Elliot, of the New York Herald Tribune; Edgar Mowrer, of the Chicago Daily News, and Harry Stone.

The American newspaper correspondents were expected to go to Zarauz, 20 miles west of San Sebastian.

Original plans for the Americans to go through to Bilbao were changed because of difficulties over rail transportation.

(Also en route to Bilboa is the United States Lines' freight McKeesport, 6,198 tons, which sailed from New York on June 15 under charter of the Red Cross with $1,000,000 worth of supplies.)

Max Shoup, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce in France, and American Embassy attaches have been helping round up the last of the Americans in Frnace and arranging their entry into Spain.

Shoup reported conditions of "utter chaos" in southern France.

Among those entering Spain during the day were members of the Rothschild family, world famous European bankers.

Prince Xavier of Bourbon-Parma, Carlist pretender to the vanished throne of Spain, was denied permission today to enter Spain as a refugee from France.

on the western border to return and promised them that damaged or destroyed houses would be restored.

Rudolf Hess, No. 3 Nazi, sent Hitler a glowing telegram, calling the victory the most glorious in German history, and declaring:

"You have given meaning to the erans which lasted many years." erans which lasted man years."

The order to cease firing marked the end of a 46-day campaign which brought France to her knees, with most of her soil occupied by German soldiers, and the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg under the Nazi flag.

Atlantic Coast Held

In 73 days, since the start of the Scandinavian campaign on April 9, Germany has acquired all the Atlantic Coast from the Arctic to Spain.

Now the German armed force is freed for an attack expected on England, declared the principal enemy of Hitler's Reich.

It was clear to every German that all energies now could be concentrated on settling scores with Great Britain.

That this attack on England will dwarf even the blitzkrieg which humbled France, was indicated in semiofficial comment.

Raeder Makes Tour

Preliminary preparation for the great drive included further advances by German forces in France, extending the Nazi grip on coast vantage points useful against British seapower, and a tour of inspection by Grand Admiral Erich Raeder to make certain that Nazi naval units and naval facilities were ready for the word "go."

U-boat activity against British shipping continued unabated, but the high command reported Nazi air activity "limited to North Sea reconnaissance."

Cottages Bombed

This was generally taken to mean a lull before the air storm against Britain. The high command's mention of renewed bombing of "cottages" and other nonmilitary objectives by British planes penetrating Germany therefore drew particular attention.

On land the mopping up of final vestiges of French resistance continued, the high command reporting its troops breaking through southeast of Lyon to advance toward Grenoble and Chambery, while in Alsace-Lorraine scattered French groups surrendered, and additional fortifications of the Maginot Line were taken.

Official quarters had not yet confirmed tonight Hitler's armistice terms signed by the French as published in London. Seldom has German officialdom been more tight-lipped than in this connection. Highest quarters evidently felt that nothing must be given out in Berlin until the French-Italian armistice becomes effective.

Italy Concludes Her 2-Week War

("Some day, I promise you, our Allied forces, the best of the French army, the mechanized army, by land, by sea and by air, together with Allies, will restore liberty to the world and greatness to our country.")

Recognizing the hard terms to which France has yielded after 46 days of the German "total war" and two weeks of conflict with Italy, Minister of Interior Charles Pomaret proclaimed the day of mourning.

Flags to Be Draped

"Today France must be silent," he said. "Her heart will bleed, but she will forge a new hope."

The troops, so recently locked in mortal combat, are to be confined to barracks; all flags will be draped; and all stores, cafes and theaters will be closed; the government will attend special religious services.

Then France must begin the tremendous task of rebuilding and rehabilitation imposed on her by the conquerors.

The full armistice terms will be announced approximately 48 hours from the official end of hostilities this morning.

Italians Attack in Alps

In its last communique while fighting still was in progress, the French command related that the Germans were making slight progress, but had reached Angouleme, 65 miles northeast of Bordeaux, and Aix-les-Bains, resort in Savoy, 40 miles south of Geneva.

Italian attacks in the Alps continued all day, the communique said, but made little progress except for a slight advance past Lanslebourg and the occupation of Menton on the Riviera, just inside the French border.

The end of the conflict, for France, leaves her ally, Great Britain, to carry on almost alone in the war which was declared against Germany last September 3 and into which Italy plunged two weeks ago.

Capital to Move

The government expected to stay in Bordeaux until (four words censored) when it will start for an unoccupied capital in one of the departments to be left free of German troops (five lines censored).

(The German armistice terms allow the French government to move to any point within the occupied area, even to Paris, if it desires. Apparently, the French chose to stay in their own straitened area, which will mean abandonment of Bordeaux, one of the cities to be within the German occupation zone.)

The Bordeaux radio announcer said the government soon would establish its seat in a town in central France and would do "all in its power to insure the running of parliamentary and administrative work."

[Arrangements for the transfer of the Petain government back to the Paris region were made by Marshal Petain and Hitler in direct negotiations, the United Press said.

Return to Paris Planned

[The next move of the government will be only semi-permanent, it stated, in order to remove the government from Germany's occupation of the west coast of France, including Bordeaux and the government soon will return to Paris after negotiations succeed in liberating the city.]

The cabinet's decision to accept Italy's terms came late yesterday after a series of meetings presided over by President Lebrun.

At its final meeting at 5:30 p. m. (11:30 a. m. E. S. T.) the cabinet directed Gen. Charles Huntziger, ranking envoy of the four-man French delegation meeting with the Italians near Rome, to sign the agreement.

French Proclaim Day of Mourning

sacrifices of war," was not present when the armistice was signed in the seventeenth century Villa Incheasa, 12 miles from Rome.

Presumably Mussolini had not even seen the four French delegates at any time since they arrived by German plane from Munich yesterday afternoon to open the negotiations. The terms were presented Sunday in 20 minutes, and discussions lasted nearly four hours yesterday in a large salon on the ground floor of the villa.

In the end Gen. Charles Huntziger, leader of the French delegation, and Marshal Pietro Badoglio, chief of the Italian general staff, signed the documents.

The discussions had been carried on in French around a long table. During this time automobiles arrived and departed, carrying naval officers from Rome and others who presumably were called into consultation or were the bearers of messages.

The French, having agreed in the German terms to surrender and interment of their fleet, demobilization and disarmament of the French army and Nazi occupation of more than half of France, were prepared for harsh treatment from Italy.

Since Italy's conquest of Ethiopia, concluded in 1936, the Fascist press and public had proclaimed Italian rights to Nice, Savoy, Corsica, Malta, Tunisia, Djibouti and the Suez Canal.

War on Maritime Issues

"We are taking up arms," cried Mussolini on June 10, when he announced the declaration of war, "after having solved the problem of our continental frontiers, to solve our maritime frontiers.

"We want to break the territorial and military chains which confine us in our sea, since a people of 45,000,000 souls is not truly free if it has not free access to the ocean."

Save for the past few days, Italy had limited her activities almost entirely to air attacks on strategic British and French points, to some African skirmishing in remote outposts, to casual sea encounters and to some minor fighting on the Franco-Italian frontier.

Three Forts Reported Taken

But today the Italian general headquarters said a large-scale offensive opened four days ago was progressing successfully in the Alps, adding that the French were resisting gallantly, but with little effect. Three strong French forts in the Alps were reported taken.

It looked like a last-minute blow for Mussolini's vast armies which for nearly ten months had kept large British and French forces immobilized in the Mediterranean area.

It was in an atmosphere of suppressed jubilation on the Fascist side and one of resignation on the French that the four Frenchmen—Huntziger, Leon Noel, former Ambassador to Poland; Rear Admiral Maurice Le Luc, and Aviation Gen. Jean Bergeret—arrived in Rome yesterday.

Roatta Reads Terms

At the villa yesterday Marshal Badoglio ordered Gen. Mario Roatta, army assistant chief of staff, to read the terms.

Gen. Huntziger formally acknowledged that he and his companions had taken note of the conditions and would transmit them to their government at Bordeaux. Then all retired, Count Ciano speeding off to see Mussolini.

The French telephoned their government at Bordeaux yesterday and again today, and at 3:45 p. m. (9:45 a. m., E. S. T.) the discussions were resumed with Marshal Badoglio, Gen. Roatta; Admiral Domenico Cavagnari, naval chief of staff, and Gen. Francisco Pricoli, chief of the air force.

Poles Land to Help Britain Fight On a wandering Polish army and diehard exiled French leaders as well as her own subjects.

The French claimed to speak for the French fleet and the French colonial empire, and there were reports that such French leaders as former Premier Reynaud and some members of his cabinet might join the French National Committee formed here.

Exports to France Barred

Britain technically has not recognized this group as the government of France, but Sunday she declared the Bordeaux government could no longer be regarded as independent, and yesterday exports to European France, including Corsica, were barred.

Today's raids came just after Harold Nicholson, parliamentary secretary of the British Ministry of Information, had asserted in a radio broadcast:

"The day will come, and not so very far distant, when the air will be under our command."

Arrival of the Polish forces from France was disclosed by Gen. Wladyslav Sikorski, the Polish prime minister.

In a broadcast he declared "the great body of our armies, safely back from France, is landing on the shores of Great Britain to continue to fight, shoulder to shoulder, with the powerful British Empire for a free and independent Poland."

The size of the surviving Polish forces, driven across half of the continent since last September 1, was not given.

Gen. Charles De Gaulle, head of the French National Committee in exile, voiced the assurance that "all parts of the French Empire will go on fighting."

Gen. De Gaulle, who was ousted from the French army for repudiating the Bordeaux government's capitulation to Hitler and organizing a French national committee here, said in an interview there was no doubt former Premier Reynaud of France would join the committee and added:

"I have reason to think that the French fleet will not surrender to the enemy."

Besides the possibility that Reynaud will come to London to help continue the fight, it was reported that Yvon Delbos, a former foreign minister; Cesar Campinchi, former minister of the navy, Leon Blum, premier of the former Popular Front government, and Edouard Herriot, resigned president of the French Chamber of Deputies, would also join the De Gaulle group.

"War Is Not Yet Over"

"It is necessary that the flame of resistance should be kept burning," De Gaulle said later in a broadcast from the London radio to the French. "The war is not yet over."

He added that the capitulation of France "exists only on paper."

The Daily Mail's diplomatic correspondent, Wilson Broadbent, wrote that Reynaud hoped to reach London and with De Gaulle reestablish his government with himself at the head "somewhere on French territory."

Informed diplomatic sources said that, although Gen. De Gaulle continued to have the fullest support of the British government, Britain is maintaining diplomatic relations with the French government in Bordeaux and with the French Ambassador, Charles Corbin, who remains in London.

Envoy Leaves France

The same sources, however, said that Sir Ronald Hugh Campbell, British Ambassador to France, had left aboard a British warship since "the overrunning of France by the Germans had put his person in danger."

De Gaulle's headquarters reported today it was receiving a constant stream of Frenchmen from all walks of life and there was a flood of telephone calls and cable messages backing his stand.

The French Embassy declined to comment on his status.

At his headquarters Gen. De Gaulle wore the uniform of the French army. With him were a number of uniformed French officers, several wearing medals and ribbons.

De Gaulle said he had received an "almost unbelievable response" to his broadcast appeal for Frenchmen to make a last-ditch fight, and prophesied that the first military reverse inflicted on Hitler would make possible the organization of "some kind of resistance on French soil."

London "Capital of War"

The French, however, would keep "some kind of representation" in London which has become the "capital of the war," he said. For the time being, he added, a "real" French government would not be formed.

De Gaulle said he did not know exactly where his former chief, Reynaud, was at the moment and was "not certain of the authenticity of reports that he had gone to New York."

Sikorski mentioned two Polish divisions as having been in action near the Maginot Line and "part of the armored division of Gen. Maczek." In addition he spoke of the "Highland Brigade of Gen. Szysko-Bohusz" which had fought in Norway. These references gave some indication of the size of the Polish reinforcements.

Canadian Tax Boost Levies 80% on Autos

$110,000,000 in New Revenue Expected From Year's Budget

By the Associated Press

Ottawa, June 24.—Drastic increases in income taxes reaching virtually every wage earner, taxes ranging up to 80 per cent on automobiles and several new levies were disclosed today in the wartime budget put before the House of Commons by Canadian Finance Minister J. L. Ralston.

A married man with no dependents, paying $36 on a salary of $3,000 under present rates, will now pay $105.

The new tax on automobiles, starting at 10 per cent on the manufacturers' value up to $700 and increasing to 80 per cent in excess of $1,200, was designed virtually to prohibit the purchase of high-priced cars and thus conserve foreign exchange.

The budget, proposed for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1941, will be debated in Parliament shortly.

Ralston estimated receipts from the new taxes for the year would be $110,000,000, bringing the year's revenue to $760,000,000. Total expenditures, however, were estimated at $1,148,000,000. The minister said that in view of various commitments for war purposes, the over-all deficit for the year might be about $800,000,000.

The over-all deficit for the fiscal year ended last March 31 was $118,000,000, the exact amount of war expenditures for the period. Total revenues were $562,000,000, an all-time Canadian high.

Torpedo-Boat Sale To Britain Halted

French National Committee being set up in London to continue French resistance to Germany, the State Department instructed Ambassador Anthony J. Drexel Biddle to proceed from Bordeaux to London to continue his contact with the refugee Polish government.

William C. Bullitt, Ambassador to France, who did not follow the French government from Paris and, accordingly, was cut off from the State Department for days, was reported to have reached Bordeaux, present seat of government.

From Robert M. Hanes, of Winston-Salem, N. C., president of the American Bankers' Association, Mr. Roosevelt received a pledge of cooperation from the financial community in the national defense program and assurance that the country is better equipped than in 1917 to handle financial problems arising from the emergency.

Secretary of State Hull indicated that he intends personally to head this country's delegation to the forthcoming Havana meeting of American nations, called to consider joint action required by warchanged economic conditions.

Chairman James L. Fly of the Federal Communications Commission announced plans for a defense communications committee to "cope with any eventualities." It probably will include representatives of the War, Navy and State Departments, the FCC and the communications industry.

The White House statement on sale of the torpedo boats said that Lewis Compton, acting Secretary of the Navy, yesterday gave the President a memorandum setting forth "five military advantages" the Navy would have received if the proposed sale by the Electric Boat Co., the builders, had been possible.

The advantages were listed as:

The boats now being built will have 18-inch torpedoes—an obsolete type in the Navy and not now in production—whereas boats to be delivered later would carry standard 21-inch torpedoes, with doubled firing power, doubled range and greater speed.

By accepting deferred deliveries and recordering, the production of hulls and engines—the latter a "bottleneck"—would have been accelerated.

The Navy would have been able to obtain improvements both in hull design and engine performance.

No appreciable amount of time would have been lost, since during the six-month construction period the Navy would have run competitive tests on English and American-designed vessels to determine the best type for mass production.

Walsh Charges Denied

Retention of boats with 18-inch torpedo tubes would require retooling of "already overloaded sources of supply" for the standard 21-inch torpedo in order to manufacture reserves of the 18-inch weapon.

In reply to a charge of Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, chairman of the Senate Naval Committee, that the deal had been undertaken in a "surreptitious" manner, Compton's statement said the action "was in no way surreptitious and was predicated entirely on what was considered to be, by those competent to judge, to the military advantage of the United States Navy."

On Capitol Hill, however, members of Congress who had criticized the proposal voiced pleasure at its abandonment.

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Idaho, declaring "we may need those ships some day," said he welcomed what he called indications that the Administration was "backing down" on its policy of aiding the Allies.

Senator Holt, West Virginia, and Senator Wheeler, of Montana, both Democrats, approved the President's terminating of negotiations. Wheeler said Walsh had called attention several days ago to the 1917 law cited by the President.

It's Now "Up to Congress"

On the other hand, Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, who favors all possible help to European democracies, warned that the question of aid is now "squarely up to Congress." He said he could not "conceive of the folly" of the United States letting Great Britain and her navy be destroyed.

Secretary Hull, meanwhile, announced that Ray Atherton, recently returned American Minister to Denmark, would take over the duties of chief of the European division of the State Department, succeeding J. Pierrepont Moffat, new Minister to Canada. Atherton will retain his title of Minister to Denmark, which is now occupied by the Germans.

Hull declined to discuss the question of this country recognizing the new French National Committee in London, whose objective is continued French fighting with the British against Germany.

However, it was recalled that President Roosevelt, in his last message to French Premier Reynaud, declared that in accordance with its policy "not to recognize the results of conquest of territory acquired through military aggression, the Government of the United States will not consider as valid any attempts to infringe by force the independence and territorial integrity of France."

Minister to Denmark Describes Germans' 'Blitzkrieg' Invasion

RAY ATHERTON

Ray Atherton, United States Minister to Denmark and witness of the "blitziest" of this war's blitzkriegs returned to Washington yesterday and was appointed acting chief of the State Department's European Division.

The division's former chief, Jay Pierrepont Moffat, has been appointed Minister to Canada. Atherton, in his new post, will retain his status as minister to Denmark, while American affairs in Copenhagen are handled by a charge d'affaires.

After a session with newspaper photographers, Atherton told a Post reporter of his experiences in Denmark during the German occupation of that tiny monarchy.

"It all happened so quietly, so swiftly, in Denmark", said Atherton, "that we hardly knew it until it was all over."

"Of course, we knew, several days in advance, that a mighty German fleet was advancing through the straits toward Denmark," the tall, well-tailored, 37-year-old career diplomat said.

"Yet when we woke up, about 5 a. m., April 9, the city had been occupied during the night by the Germans, with hardly any fuss."

Atherton said that his personal life had been only slightly affected by the German occupation.

"Usually the Danes were to be seen working under German direction after the occupation," Atherton said. "Thus the police and other civic officials of Copenhagen did not change, they merely took orders from different masters. I continued to be accredited to the Danish government."

Atherton recalled unsmilingly that he had seen fifth columnists in the flesh.

"In a small town like Copenhagen you naturally get to see and know a lot of people who go to the opera, the ballet and the concerts. Many whom I saw there were blond Germans who looked just like Swedes or Danes.

"The only difference was that after the Nazi occupation these blond people turned up riding around in German staff cars. Then we knew that they must have aided the Germans to enter the country."

Atherton declined to draw any lessons for this country from the activities of fifth columnists in Denmark.

Treason Beat France, General Says

By the United Press

Bordeaux, June 24.—Treason was a "decisive factor" in the defeat of France, Gen. Maurice Duval, military expert of the newspaper Le Journal, asserted today.

"Did an army ever receive such a stab in the back as our own?" he asked. "We fought bravely and heroically, even our enemy admitted this.

"We were attacked from an uncovered rear. The work of the fifth column played too large a part in our misfortune to be quickly forgotten."

Beaten By Treason

Duval asserted Germany could not have beaten France by force of arms alone.

"We weren't beaten by the Germans but by all the agents of treason whom they sent into our country," he said.

"That is what the Germans maintained in 1918. We certainly have a greater right than they to assume such reasoning."

Explanation to U. S.

Bordeaux, June 24 (AP).—A member of the French government, in an appeal for understanding in the United States, declared today France's decision to seek peace with Germany and Italy was taken with full independence of action.

The statement disavowed all former members of the government who fled the country and urged Frenchmen not to continue resistance by forming a factional government in London which, it declared, would only create dissension.

(This apparently was in reference to the French national committee, whose formation in England was announced last night by Gen. Charles de Gaulle.)

Advice Laid to Mandel

The statement attacked "the present British failure to understand," and claimed that when the French first advised the British they would have to seek an armistice Prime Minister Churchill told Paul Reynaud, then premier, that Britain "would understand."

The government indicated the change in Britain's attitude was due partly to former French Minister of the Interior Mandel, who tried to make Britain insist that France must carry on at all costs.

In a seven-page explanation, the member of the government said:

"We ask our friends in America to try to understand France's immense sadness. We do not seek to hide the errors of our country.

Ask Respect for Sadness

"We regret that certain members of the British government criticize us unjustly. We wish our English friends to respect our sadness and examine their own conscience."

The minister asserted that Britain, before the war, had promised to send into France 26 divisions (some 390,000 men) during the first month's hostilities. Instead, he declared, while France kept men 48 years old under arms, Britain had not yet mobilized men of 28.

He said that last March a French newspaper delegation went to England and found proof that the English war effort was "insufficient."

British 'Traditional'

The English, the minister added, carried on a "traditional" form of warfare. On the eve of the great German offensive, he asserted, Britain still appeared to be unruffled, relying on her navy and air force and carrying on a "business as usual" policy with half a million jobless men still on her hands.

The French spokesman said "the most dramatic meeting ever held by the French government" was June 12 at Chateau de Grange, near Tours.

There Gen. Maxime Weygand, the Allied field commander, explained to the ministers the grave military situation, and the majority opinion was that with or without an armistice France could not escape total occupation.

A request was then sent to Prime Minister Churchill to come to France for consultation.

The French cabinet met again at 3 o'clock the following morning, "pacing the gardens sadly in small groups" while awaiting Churchill for two hours.

At 5 a. m. former Premier Reynaud and Mandel arrived and said they had seen Churchill, who sent word that he had been obliged to return to England without seeing the entire cabinet.

Reynaud, the spokesman said, declared that Churchill told him the British government would continue to give France maximum aid, but if events forced France into an armistice he (Churchill) and Lord Halifax and Lord Beaverbrook were in accord that "England in no case would do anything to harm an ally in difficulty, and would understand the situation."

The decision to ask an armistice was delayed 24 hours, this minister said, to await President Roosevelt's reply to a French appeal and to permit a fuller explanation of the situation to the English.

Certain members of the cabinet, notably Mandel, who, the spokesman declared, "had received no authorization from the government," attempted to induce the British government to disavow Churchill's promise that England would "understand."

PROTECT YOURSELF AGAINST "PACKED" PRICES
You can see the value in the car. The wall chart shows all items in the price. Thus you can better judge what you get for your money.

TAKE a careful look at this "plainview" price chart that we General Motors dealers are displaying in our showrooms.

It helps you see the money difference a new car will cost you. It's the best protection against price "packing" that you can have.

For it spotlights all of the charges that occasion the difference between delivered-at-the-factory prices and the delivered prices you pay here in your home town.

It shows how much you are charged for the car itself—how much for transportation of the car from factory to you, based on rail rates—how much for any extra equipment or accessories that you may elect to buy.

These are the items that make up the final delivered prices.

Thus we avoid unexplained items which might be a "pack"—that is, an added amount slipped in to give higher trade-in allowances, which may not reduce the money difference you actually pay out.

We General Motors dealers use this wall chart and the "plainview" price tag so you can buy on real value instead of on trade-in allowances.

They show you all items in the final delivered price of the car. Come in and learn more about them.

This is the standard price tag used by General Motors dealers to show what makes up the prices of new cars delivered to customers. "PRICE OF CAR" means the price we charge for the car itself, including reimbursement for Federal Tax and conditioning—"TRANSPORTATION CHARGE" means a charge for transportation from factory to you, based on rail rates—"OPTIONAL EQUIPMENT AND ACCESSORIES" means the charge for any extra equipment or accessories you elect to buy.

Imprisoned France

The France which has emerged from its grim ordeal of battle is only a helpless and truncated fragment of the France which the world has hitherto known, loved and honored.

The victors showed neither mercy nor generosity to the vanquished. The conditions imposed on France in return for the order to cease firing are as drastic as could be imagined. France is not only to be completely disarmed; that was to have been expected following her defeat. She is also to be made the passive ally of the totalitarian powers in their fight against England.

By the terms of the Franco-German armistice as reported from London, half of France, including most of the great French industrial centers, the chief raw material resources and all of the Atlantic ports will be under German occupation for at least the duration of the war. If, as is likely, the terms of the Franco-Italian armistice provide for an Italian occupation of France's Mediterranean coastline, no more than a third of that country will be left under French control. And that area will be completely cut off from the sea.

France will thus be in every real sense a prisoner of the dictators, with no real freedom of action. By the terms of the Franco-German armistice it will be required to see to it that no French forces leave French soil, that no material is conveyed to Great Britain, that no French airplanes leave the ground, that all wireless transmitting stations remain silent. It will be required to facilitate transport of merchandise between Germany and Italy across the territory nominally under its control, prevent the transfer of valuables and stocks from occupied to non-occupied territory or abroad and pay for the maintenance of German occupying troops.

In the meantime, Germany may demand the surrender of all artillery, tanks, antitank guns, service aircraft, infantry armament and other weapons which she will be able to turn against Great Britain. There is certainly no provision in the armistice terms to the contrary, although the German government does "solemnly declare" that "it has no intention of using for its own purposes during the war the French fleet stationed in ports under German control except those units necessary for coast surveillance and minesweeping."

For at least the duration of the war, the destinies of France will be in Hitler's hands, her resources at his disposal, her government with no choice but to do his bidding. The population of France will thus, for an indeterminate period, find themselves in much the same position as the French soldiers captured by the Germans. These troops, it is provided in the armistice agreement, are not to be released until the conclusion of peace. Neither will the French people.

A whole nation has been made prisoner as a prelude, no doubt, to being put to work to help Hitler encompass the destruction of France's British ally. The French calamity thus reaches a doubly tragic climax.

War And The Exchanges

In its current financial survey the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York says that "nowhere have the disrupting effects of the war been more evident than in foreign exchange markets." The German, Polish, Danish, Norwegian, Dutch and Belgian currencies are no longer quoted in New York. The French franc ceased to be quoted on June 17, and future quotations for Swiss francs have also been discontinued.

Thus the dollar becomes an increasingly important unit of international account, with only New York left as an important free exchange market.

It would be a mistake, however, to infer that the dollar is acquiring the importance as a world currency which the pound once possessed. For the disordered state of the world has largely deprived the exchange mechanism of its old power to regulate and facilitate the movement of goods between countries.

The dollar has become increasingly important because it is regarded as a stable currency, possession of which insures control over valuable goods and services. But in a war-torn world in which international trade has fallen under the control of governmental authorities to an increasing extent, free movement of goods facilitated by free exchange systems has become the exception rather than the rule.

Mr. Stassen's Keynote

Gov. Harold E. Stassen's keynote address at the Philadelphia convention was an adroit blend of traditional Republicanism and current political thought. In dealing with specific issues he did not spare the New Deal. Yet he did not look backward to the "good old days." With a large measure of cool thinking and good judgment, he addressed himself to the momentous problems of the turbulent present.

Incidentally, the young Minnesota Governor referred to the appointment of Henry L. Stimson and Frank Knox to the President's Cabinet with a finesse which puts Chairman Hamilton of the Republican National Committee to shame. "We are pleased that the prospect of our convention caused this sudden improvement over New Deal incompetence," he said, "and it is only regrettable that we cannot change the entire Cabinet and the man who heads it with equal abruptness." That ability to turn a disappointment into a political asset will be much in demand during the G. O. P. campaign that lies ahead.

In dealing with the Administration's international policy, Gov. Stassen made the most of his opportunity. His call for adequate preparedness and for planning in advance for effective defense of the Western Hemisphere is in line with policies already taking shape under the Roosevelt Administration. His desire to aid Great Britain in her fight against the Nazi system also appears to sustain the policy Washington is following.

Yet there are vital distinctions between the position taken by the G. O. P. keynoter and that of the Administration. Mr. Stassen recognizes that we are too weak in the materials of warfare to make our indirect aid immediately effective or to back up the belligerent attitude which the President has frequently assumed. His thrust about "our leaders" strutting down the avenues of the world, "jauntily knocking chips off shoulders without even preparing to raise our arms in self-defense" unquestionably strikes the Administration's policy at its weakest point.

Gov. Stassen's characterization of our foreign policy as "a big noise and a little stick, and even that little stick 'on order'," will resound through many a political gathering during the campaign. Like most political slogans it is an exaggeration. But it contains enough pointed truth to cause the Administration a good deal of embarrassment.

There was no indication in the keynote speech that the Republicans intend to concentrate their fire on international policy and national defense. Some of the most stinging jibes from young Mr. Stassen were directed at our mounting public debt, at the failure of the Administration to deal effectively with unemployment and agricultural depression and at what he called the New Deal's contribution to industrial warfare.

In making these charges Gov. Stassen took advantage of the challenger's privilege of offering more criticism than constructive advice. But that is to be expected from a keynoter for the minority party. The important point is that a selected spokesman for the Republican Party has ably challenged the Administration on the most vital issues of current national policy. His address leaves no doubt that a formidable challenge to the Administration is in the making at Philadelphia.

American Cooperation

Because of the increasing possibility of a totalitarian triumph in Europe the nations of this hemisphere must cooperate to guard against three related dangers.

The first but most remote danger is that of actual invasion. To meet any potential threat of this sort the United States is now straining every nerve to build up its defenses. Plans already approved by Congress call for a very considerable expansion in our Army, Navy and air force. The other republics are also taking steps to enhance their security. A coordination of these parallel efforts is clearly in order and should be achieved.

The second and more immediate danger to the security of American nations arises out of the economic dependence of Latin-American nations on European markets and the possibility that this dependence might be used by a triumphant Germany as a weapon with which to create satellite states in this hemisphere. In an effort to guard against any such development discussions are soon to be undertaken for an increased measure of inter-American economic cooperation.

The third danger lies in the existence of so-called fifth column movements in certain nations of the New World. Uruguay, in particular, is concerned over an insidious threat to her internal security. That helps to explain why the United States cruiser Quincy was recently sent on what was announced as a good-will tour to Montevideo.

Soon after its arrival the American Minister to Uruguay, Edwin C. Wilson, made a speech announcing that the United States Government is prepared to cooperate with the governments of the other republics of the New World in crushing all activities arising from non-American sources that imperil the political or economic freedom of the Americas.

Just what form this cooperation will take will depend, of course, on circumstances and on the readiness of the countries that feel themselves in danger to accept American assistance. For the moment it is gratifying to note that the United States and at least some of the other nations of this hemisphere are determined to meet whatever menace arises by joint action. The next step should be an agreement as to specific cooperative measures that will be taken to safeguard the Americas against aggression in any form.

Factories For Defense

Most people think of a defense program in terms of ships, airplanes, and motorized equipment for expanding naval, air and land forces. But before these things can be delivered in the desired quantities, there must be adequate plant capacity for producing them.

Already demands for steel are said to be outstripping the capacity of that industry, although the defense program is just getting under way. The railroads, alarmed by this development, are also preparing to place heavy orders for rolling stock and rails to meet the anticipated strain upon their facilities.

In short, it is apparent that large sums will have to be spent in the construction of plants to produce munitions if the defense program is to go forward successfully. Mr. Knudsen is said to have estimated that an immediate outlay of about $1,000,000,000 is needed to increase the production of machine tools, aircraft, chemicals, powder and similar essentials.

Under ordinary conditions of expanding industrial demand, private industry can be relied upon to meet new capital needs from existing reserves or by borrowing. The defense program, however, calls for a specialized kind of industrial expansion for the execution of Government orders, and it is vitally important that this needed plant capacity shall be provided with a minimum of delay. Since there is no way of knowing whether or when the present emergency will pass, an unusual amount of risk is involved in the investment of new capital in these undertakings. One of the most important problems confronting our defense planners, therefore, is that of financing plant expansion.

With profits on Government contracts limited, a manufacturer must somehow cover the cost of capital equipment that will be no longer needed when the defense program is completed. Otherwise he may end with a loss on his contracts.

The question of allowances for obsolescence is now occupying the attention of Treasury experts. They are said to be working on a formula for estimating depreciation of new factories, for purposes of tax computation, with the object of encouraging private investment for military purposes. The alternative to private financing is outright Government expenditures for plant construction or loans from the RFC.

It must be admitted that the special character of the defense program creates obstacles to the financing of plant expansion by private capital. But, with intelligent cooperation between Government and industry to relieve the latter of undue risks, private capital should be able to provide a considerable part of the funds needed.

For years there have been complaints that idle savings were piling up for lack of investment outlets. Here is an opportunity to put some of this idle capital to work in the service of the Nation. In this way, the steady encroachment of governmental agencies upon private industry can be checked and Government funds can be saved or diverted to direct purchases of defense equipment.

"There is no reality in this so-called physical world except your own mental concept of it," declares Sir James Jeans. We wish we could stop imagining that person we conceive to be Hitler.

"An experimenter extinguished a candle flame by playing a high note on the violin."—Newspaper filler. It may develop that Nero has been unjustly censured.

Yes, there are persons in this world who never worry. But their families, friends (if any) and associates do.

Mr. Sensible

From the Christian Science Monitor

A nation-wide plan was recently announced in Britain to enlist a "Mr. Sensible" on every street to maintain public morale—local agents of reassurance responsible for allaying public fears, stimulating public effort, and giving advice and encouragement.

Here is a highly commendable plan calling for general adoption. It is a plan which every nation, belligerent or non-belligerent, cannot afford to overlook. There are too many "Mr. Nonsensibles" abroad today blowing up facts until they appear in weird distortion. Too many, deliberately or unknowingly, allow themselves to become dupes of forces that would foment fear, break down rationality, and destroy the poise which is one of the most vital pieces of equipment in combating every form of evil.

A better defense against the tendency to accept discouraging and disheartening exaggerations of the news is one of the primary needs today. A few more "Mr. Sensibles" in each community can fill this need.

Imperishable France

To the Editor of The Post, Sir: A great country, to use the word of the arch priest of Moloch, has been annihilated. But France, after having withstood as far as flesh and blood can the devastating effect of steel and fire, will not perish.

For a thousand years Paris has been the cultural center of the world; even Hitler will be unable to throttle a people whose history is replete with the best aspirations of which the human mind is capable. Even so earnest a pan-German as Nietzsche upheld the cultural force of France; he also entertained the hope that Germany would derive some benefit from French art and thought, especially letters.

If France has excelled many other countries, I should single out the humanitarian doctrine of the French outlook on life. In France humanitarianism reached a very high degree, coupled with pragmatic energy without slighting the democratic ideal, because the fusion between relative values was carried farther than in any other nation. The logic and order of Roman law, for instance, refined in the Napoleonic code, gives a continuity to the basis of French statutes that is older than the common law of England, illustrating French conservatism.

Those who were at home in either France itself, or French thought, know that it is idle to talk about destroying the mind and soul of her people. The sun of "la belle France" has suffered a temporary eclipse, but no phenomenon of this kind lasts forever. Other conquerors have desired to crush that country and, at times, were successful for short periods. However, France has never, like Spain, submitted for centuries to a foreign invader.

Above everything, the general run of French men and women are individuals, not robots. They have never been conditioned to accept the fate of a slave-race; nor could they, for in the common breast of this glorious nation there is a heart that always beats in unison with the finest traditions of the whole of mankind. GUY d'AULBY.

Chicago, June 18.

From Mr. Van Loon

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is not easy for me to pass the hat to the readers of The Washington Post, but circumstances alter cases and I hope you will lay this letter before them through your columns.

You know the story, and my accent on the air must have betrayed the fact (if otherwise it was unknown) that I was born in the Low Countries by the North Sea, now at the mercy of Adolf Hitler.

This invasion, like all other similar attacks upon neutral democracies, came without a word of warning and left tens of thousands of Hollanders stranded high and dry in all the 99 different corners of the planet.

Their number was greatly augmented by those refugees who succeeded in escaping Herr Hitler's most efficient Stukas and Messerschmidts, and who are now in France (some 50,000 as far as we know), in England (tens of thousands), in Portugal (number unknown), and in every port where Dutch ships plied. Most of these people, being practical souls, will eventually find ways and means to shift for themselves but they need a lift, some food, a place in which to sleep and clothes to wear on their backs.

To those good people who wish to help, send your gift direct to me at national headquarters of The Queen Wilhelmina Fund, Inc., 10 Rockefeller Plaza, New York City. And please send it today. The physical suffering of these refugees cannot wait.

HENDRIK WILLEM VAN LOON,
The Queen Wilhelmina Fund, Inc.

National Preparedness

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Napoleon's comment on democracy as "government by chatter" now applies to affairs in America. The Congress approved the sales of Army and Navy materials to the Allies, but transfer of the mosquito boats meets criticism. The Post, the Congress and the Administration apparently agree on principles but not on details.

Your editorial of June 20, "On The German Model," is additional example. Even though there isn't a question-mark in the title, it is implied. Has anyone proved that the German model doesn't work? Isn't our difference with the German State a matter of ideology and international aspiration rather than the manner in which Germany has been organized for peak efficiency?

The Post should well realize that this is no time to contribute to public confusion. Democracies can afford no longer the luxury of public discussion while totalitarian armies are on the march.

We are trying to maintain our national existence against outside threat. The security of our state is endangered by a dynamic, growing force which is almost religious in its fanaticism and overpowering in its economics. If and when that forces is crushed, we can then work for resumption of our inherited rights and privileges. We don't need hysterical patriotism nor "rah-rah" mobilization, but we do need cold, calculating and grim organization to mold this nation into the greatest fighting machine that the world has ever seen.

But the Post admits that steps must be taken to prepare our Nation for the coming blow—whether it falls on our own soil, South America, or wherever American military considerations think it best. The issues are not ones to be adjudicated by conference but must be arrived at through force of arms. The burden of this clash falls upon us—the youth of this nation—and it is the duty of our leaders to prepare youth for the struggle. Bodies must be hardened; minds and spirits toughened; and conscription seems to be the most efficient and equitable way to accomplish this necessary end. CLAXON.

A Mother Speaks

My daughter is as dear to me as any mother's son is to her; I therefore look to the sons of America to protect her from being sent to a Nazi concentration camp.

ANOTHER AMERICAN MOTHER.

Washington, June 20.

"The Mailed Fist"

I protest against the President's speech as ignoring the express desire of this country to stay out of the European war. We all despise Mussolini's cold-blooded action, but this does not entitle the Chief Executive of our Government to permit himself the luxury of shaking the mailed fist.

ALICE H. MORGAN.

Chevy Chase, Md., June 20.

Universal Service

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Dorothy Thompson was right in saying that universal military training would be a guarantee for the protection of the rights of our people from attacks from within and without, for individuals or nations do not bother with those who are well equipped to protect themselves. Hitler would not have attacked England and France if their governments had not been asleep and left them poorly armed and trained.

It seems to me that training useful in case of war should be given to every able-bodied man of military age who is on relief, and to Government workers. Likewise, all other able-bodied men without dependents should be required to take six months in camp.

If sacrifice is to be required of poor men it should likewise be required of the rich. In war, coordination and discipline are as important in industry as they are in the Army, and the captains of industry must learn to obey the same as the captains of troops. One lagging plant making essential war materials must not be permitted to delay progress in another plant which is dependent on those parts. I think that the Government should have such control over war industries that would enable them to count on schedules of production being followed.

Some will say that this is not the American way of doing things. Well, it was not the English or French way, either, and look where they are. WILLIAM OWEN.

Washington, June 16.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of June 19 a letter writer states that the "young people who have to do the dying" at Yale, Harvard and Dartmouth are against our becoming "involved" in Europe's war and that the older faculty members, who "if they do service will do it from behind desks" state that "an early entry into the fray is imperative."

This is an old argument and a short-sighted one. Does it not follow that the statement of the faculty members bears all the more weight because it was made by older and wiser men than the young student body which they are tutoring? ANN FRANCE WILSON.

Alexandria, Va., June 19.

Spiritual Truths

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Materially, the cost of a year's subscription to The Post was squared by Dorothy Thompson's anchor-sheet article in your paper of June 21, entitled "Thoughts During This Struggle."

Spiritually, this same article makes increasingly clear the old adage, "Man's extremity is God's opportunity." Anti-Christ is followed by Christ (truth) just as surely as day follows night, and true man will ever emerge out of the mire and muck of his own making.

Every Woman Loves a Baby

At one time Madame was one of the big stars of the movies. When I came along that week as Madame's press agent she was no longer a great star, which fact everyone but Madame knew.

We opened her new act in a big house in Pittsburgh and the first show came on after the first movie at about 12:30 in the afternoon. Exhibited amid the lush shadows which some of the boys backstage can create, Madame still looked pretty fine—say from any place after the first ten rows. She was featuring that tune, "Paradise," which was sweeping the country to such an extent that the playing of the first two bars was practically a signal for an outburst of applause.

By all odds Madame should have been a riot at that first show. But—she wasn't.

Backstage in her dressing room after her exit, Madame was sitting on her sofa, her pale purple robe hanging about her ample white shoulders and her black bobbed hair falling forward on her high cheekbones. She kept running her long painted fingers through her hair and cursing.

"Dose babees, dose babees," she kept saying, along with a couple of adjectives, "dose babees!"

I looked at her manager and I could see that he, too, had been having a terrible time.

"Get oud," shouted Madame in her best Hollywood, "get oud and get dose babees oud!"

Her manager had been given the name of Louis Marthal by Madame, but he was still Newton H. Hamby to most of us.

"Newt," I asked, "what happened?"

"Lord knows," said Newt, "but if the act don't go any better this next time I reckon we'll all be canned."

"Including Madame?"

"Sure," he said, "she's what's wrong. Didn't you see it? Pardon me, I mean hear it?"

I said I didn't.

"Why it was awful," he said. "You know that entrance she does on 'Paradise?' Why they laughed at it."

I sat with Newt at the second show.

The light came up slowly. The drums rolled softly. The curtains parted lightly. There stood Madame in her gorgeous costume beneath a gilded Gothic arch. The drums swelled. A couple of horns came in. The lights came up. The drums were deafening. Then, whango! The drummer smacked the Chinese cymbal. Madame relaxed in her gilded Gothic arch. And then it happened.

From all over the house came the cry of infants. You know the kind—that 5:30-in-the-morning kind. That wail that sounds like the call of the wild. And, right upon that there came laughter. The horse-laugh kind. It was in the middle of this little piece of pandemonium that Madame burst out into the first fine phrasing of "Paradise."

Newt jumped up.

"I got it," he said, "I got the trouble. I've saved our jobs Whee!"

With me behind, Newt plunged for the aisle and hotfooted it backstage.

"After this show," he said to the stage manager, "get me the orchestra leader—and—get me that drummer. By God, get me that drummer."

Upstairs in her dressing room Madame was trying to do a super act when we came in, but Newt held up his hand and said he'd found the trouble.

"Madame," he smiled, "just forget everything that's happened. It's O. K. from now on."

Newt held his conference with the leader and the drummer and, sure enough, at the next show everything was all right. Madame was a hit, in fact, and the folks went out humming praise of Madame and phrases of "Paradise."

"You got oud dose babees," said Madame, "from now on we must keep dem oud. No babees ebber no more."

Newt shook his head.

"It ain't the babees, Madame," he said. "It was that drummer.

"Whud drummer?" asked Madame.

"Oh," said Newt, "I know."

Downstairs he told me all.

"It was that build-up, he said, "that drum roll and that Chinese cymbal. Ain't you ever notice how them women sit up front with their babies?"

I said I had.

"Well," said Newt, "they're always there."

"O. K.," I said, "and what?"

"Well," says Newt, "them drum rolls would have been all right, but not the big crash on top of 'em. They scared them babies to death. You couldn't blame 'em for bawling. Why, that cymbal practically knocked their brains out. And when their mammas saw they wasn't hurt, why, they just laughed—not at Madame, but at the babies. We just cut out the cymbal and all was well. You saw it."

The sad part of the story is that after Madame finished that week in Pittsburgh she canned Newt.

"I couldn't convince her," said Newt as he told the little "Paradise" troupe good-by. "She accused me of getting those babies into the first rows that first day."

I said I still didn't see why she blamed the babies on Newt.

"You ask her," said Newt as he went along.

I did.

"You remember de day Louis Marthal took me to dat hospital to sing in de babee ward?" asked Madame.

"Sure, Madame," I said. "I helped arrange that publicity stunt. It made good advance pictures for you."

"Yez," said Madame, "but whud else did it do? It made me," she continued, being the thorough ham she was, "be sweetheart of de babees and de mudders. Dey all comes to see me and den dose babees cry. And you," she said, pointing one of those long painted fingers at me, "you fired too."

Cruelly-Tricked G. O. P.

Philadelphia, June 24.—To one who writes politics entirely by ear it seems that the gatherings of the Republicans in Philadelphia for their second attempt to turn the rascals out is pervaded by a feeling that Adolf Hitler is watching them, and that he will have more influence in the affairs of the United States in the next four years than the next President, whatever his party. Was any American political party so cruelly tricked out of a long-awaited, unhampered turn at bat?

For seven years and more the Republicans have taken their welts and, like the Germans under Versailles, have brooded on their wrongs and pined for the hour of revenge and triumph anent President Roosevelt and Eleanor, Corcoran, Cohen, Ickes, Leon Henderson and a thousand of their obscure and mediocre but pestiferous little people would be dumped out of their public quarters in Washington and, like the bums in the Midwestern tanks 20 years ago, given a certain number of hours to get out of town.

THEN AT THE very last hour this European, this foreigner, has intruded in the situation, and their grievances against the New Deal become mere recrimination and destructive and purely partisan politics in the presence of a common enemy. There are a thousand orators in the lobbies and rooms of the Ritz, the Bellevue-Stratford and a couple of other Philadelphia hotels at the moment who could shake the plaster off the walls with the power and stridency of their bawling on any issue or none whatever, but all of them snorting and howling together into a thousand microphones with the power to enlarge their noise a thousandfold would produce only a whisper by comparison with the silent but ominous voice of Adolf Hitler over the U. S. A.

The German Fuehrer isn't here, but oh, how they wish he'd go away and let the Republican Party reclaim for one sweet week the silly, shallow absurdity of those years when band music, red fire, red eye and other sheer loudness constituted a national convention and questions didn't require answers, but only soothing.

Their only appeal, whoever their candidate, must be a promise that if they are hired to run the country they will rearm better and faster than Roosevelt can, and that meanwhile they will eliminate the likes of Bill Bullitt, speak softly, and by all the wiles of diplomacy, humility and hypocrisy endeavor to keep out of war until the Nation is muscled for a struggle. This bespeaks appeasement of a sort and a presumption that Hitler is fool enough to hold still while the U. S. A. goes into training. They can't promise not to fight, however, or even that they won't fight off the home grounds, for Hitler will decide whether war shall be and where, and Hitler is the problem before the national convention of the Republican Party of the United States, and other interests are mentioned only in a pathetic attempt to change the subject.

IN THIS situation the reunion of the morose and worried men and women of the party is recognizable by few of the old sounds and antics. Never half as rude and raucous as the Democrats at their carnivals, the Republicans this year are almost mournful, and are pulling against themselves in a juvenile resentment against the phenomenon of Wendell Willkie, afraid they will nominate him, but more afraid of another licking if they nominate anyone else.

Broad street is shadier than ever, and the heiling-around is restrained.

Mr. Bill Shearer, the old battleship salesman who did something to the Geneva conference years ago, fits himself into a niche in the lobby of the Bellevue, while around the corner on the spacious marble stairs a male chorus, after a few premonitory mi-mi-mi's, sounds off the "Star-Spangled Banner."

Forest Davis, the journalist whose whiskers and squint impart a resemblance to the late Warner Oland and once was asked to pinch-hit for him as Charlie Chan, is working for Robert Taft and wearing Taft's button. The whiskers are an old confirmed eccentricity, but the Taft button comes down at the end of the week. Henry Mencken, whose style baffled and ruined 10,000 school-of-journalism imitators 15 years ago, wears a badge like any other tourist, and half a dozen colored brothers with souvenir walking sticks proclaim their adherence to Senator Vandenberg with enormous yellow lapel buttons inscribed "Get on the Van Wagon," which is just about what you might expect. Jim Watson has been sighted, representing the good old days, but I have not seen Boo Boo Hoff, the old bootlegger and boss of the once prosperous Philadelphia underworld, and hear that he is broke, or nearly so.

ONE MORE ITEM before I go to scan the sky for Adolf Hitler's planes. In the lobby of the Benjamin Franklin Hotel three tollers are erecting a frame 10 feet tall and half as wide containing a portrait of Mr. Frank Gannett, whose expenditure on this futile work is itself a total and sardonic rebuttal of all his criticism of the New Deal for wasteful spending on useless things. If Mr. Gannett has no more intelligence than to think he could be elected President then his election would be a calamity beyond the recuperative powers of the most resilient nation on earth.

The Willkie Boom

Philadelphia, June 24.

THIS WILLKIE movement is most remarkable. Here is a man who wasn't a Republican until some two years ago; who wasn't heard of as a public figure before a year ago; who wasn't thought of as a Presidential possibility until some eight weeks ago; who did not enter a single State primary; who didn't acquire a single delegate by the ordinary means—party caucuses and the like; who has not in this convention a single delegate who is obliged to vote for him.

That is Mr. Willkie.

And here is this convention—the most un-bossed and un-led convention of either party in recent memory. It has hardly enough leadership to provide the yeast of organization, to enable it to coagulate, to "jell." When the time comes, only the high quality of the 1,000 individual delegates will enable the convention to organize and function. It is a convention in which there isn't one man who can deliver as many as five delegates to any other man. A convention in which the party's recent Presidential candidate, former Governor Landon, doesn't control as many as ten delegates—I quote a newspaper man's estimate. A convention in which hardly one delegate is under obligation to, or willing to, subordinate his personal judgment to the judgment of leaders, except as a leader appeals to reason. An exceptionally intelligent body of delegates, and exceptionally stable.

And here is this convention apparently completely tolerant of the notion of naming Mr. Willkie as the party's Presidential nominee, certainly having no fixed resistance to nominating him; willing to consider and compare this outsider on equal terms with such orthodox and experienced party leaders as Senator Taft, Senator Vandenberg and Mr. Dewey.

What is the mystery of Mr. Willkie? I suppose it's the mystery of personality—the juxtaposition of a given kind of men with a given set of conditions in the public mind. I summarize the answer of an intelligent woman:

"Mr. Willkie just happens to have the kind of personality that great masses of people like. By God's grace, he happens also to be a good man. He has the alluring and stirring quality of William Jennings Bryan—plus the education and discipline of mind that Bryan did not have. Men having this quality of getting masses of persons to follow him—such men often lend their talent to less than noble uses. In a period of prolonged distress, like the present, when such a man arises, he often leads his following toward destructive ends. Such a one was Huey Long.

"By great good luck for America, Huey Long was edged aside by Franklin Roosevelt, who took Long's following away from him, and lead them to a higher level of aspiration. Just now the Messiah-seeking part of the people are coming to feel that Mr. Roosevelt hasn't been able to live up to the expectations which many of the people set up in their own minds. It isn't what the Messiah specifically promises. It is what the dream-indulging people set up as their own vision of what he will do.

"Just at this moment, when the Messiah-seekers are beginning to feel a little let down by Mr. Roosevelt's regime, at this moment along comes Mr. Willkie. He has all Mr. Roosevelt's power to inspire dreams—and vastly more than Mr. Roosevelt's ability to make dreams come true. He has all the liking for people that Mr. Roosevelt has, all the wish to please the people—but he has what Mr. Roosevelt never had, understanding of social and political principles, knowledge of how to make the economic machine work.

"He's a better Roosevelt—and the Republicans had better thank heaven for the gift.

"All over the world people are disappointed with old forms of democratic government, the parliaments and congresses. They are disappointed with the slowness of parliaments, their cumbersomeness, their inefficiency for meeting crises. Parliamentary France could not defend itself against one-man-governed Germany.

"Everywhere people are looking for a man, for what Carlyle called a "can man." This longing is dangerous, it may lead toward dictatorship. Here in Mr. Willkie you have a personality who satisfied the longing—but at the same time would scrupulously preserve democracy, would strengthen it and make it work better."

That is the argument for Mr. Willkie, as put by an intelligent and understanding woman.

For myself, as Mr. Dooley said to Mr. Hennessey, "I dunno." Mr. Dooley said that in skepticism. I say it in simple ignorance. I literally don't know.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

From The Compiegne Armistice To The Philadelphia Convention

NOW THAT they know the terms imposed upon France, the Republican delegates must ask themselves seriously whether it is possible to conduct a campaign based upon the record and the commitments of Messrs. Taft and Dewey.

THE FRENCH ARMISTICE is a perfectly clear demonstration of what a total victory of the Axis will mean. Under this armistice France does not merely surrender as the preliminary to the negotiations of an honorable peace. Under this armistice the French nation is not only totally disarmed, and therefore rendered powerless to resist any further demands,—what is more important, the French prisoners in Germany and the French population both in the occupied and unoccupied regions are made hostages in order to provide a guarantee that the resources of France will be available to Hitler for the conquest of Great Britain. For a failure of Frenchmen—within France or in the French Empire or elsewhere—to work for Hitler these helpless prisoners will be punished.

If an armistice like this one can be imposed upon Great Britain, it will mean that the population of the British Isles will become a hostage in order to guarantee the surrender of the British navy and the placing of the resources of the British empire at the disposal of Hitler. For Hitler does not merely defeat his enemies; once they are disarmed, he absorbs them and enslaves them, and then uses their labor and their resources to attain his next objective.

THE GREAT QUESTION before the American people is whether they can gather themselves together in sufficient strength to maintain their independence, to preserve their essential liberties, and to protect an American standard of life. With Japan moving rapidly in concert with Germany and Italy, if Britain falls as France has fallen and is transformed into a vassal of Hitler, the defense of this hemisphere will obviously be inordinately difficult. The mere defense of North America will be a huge task. The maintenance of the American system of private enterprise and free competition in a world of totalitarian monopolies will be practically impossible.

Yet what is the record of Messrs. Taft and Dewey and of the isolationists who have shaped the policy of the Republican Party in the last 18 months? It is a record of having been deaf, dumb, and blind in the presence of every warning and of every epoch-making development. It is a record of never once having realized the consequences of the position which the party was taking, and, therefore, of being always surprised, always unprepared, always confused by the course of events.

EVEN AT THE ELEVENTH hour there is no slightest evidence that Messrs. Taft and Dewey have any idea, any policy, and program designed to prepare their country for what lies ahead. There is not even any evidence that Mr. Taft, who has a truly terrifying complacency, or Mr. Dewey, who changes his views from hour to hour, have been able to imagine what it will be like for a Republican candidate to defend this party record in the midst of the events that are going to happen,—and in face of an aroused, determined and patriotic public. But they might get an inkling of the underlying mood of this country, and therefore of what is in store for them if they are nominated, when they realize that, according to the most recent tests, about two-thirds of the American people now favor universal military service. No better measure could be found of how seriously the people feel about what confronts them.

THE QUESTION at Philadelphia, the question for the Republican Party, is how to write off a record that cannot be defended and then to go before the people reformed and regenerated. The nomination of Messrs. Taft and Dewey will tie the party to this indefensible record. The convention might remind themselves again what this record is, before they entomb themselves irrevocably in it.

The Republican Party as a party refused to believe as late as July a year ago that there would be a European war. They refused to examine or to credit the reports to the United States Government which showed that Hitler had created a gigantic military machine and that he was certain to strike within a short time.

In this pre-war period the party as a party supported a so-called neutrality law which denied to the Allies the right to buy arms, and therefore prevented them when there was still time from placing adequate orders in this country. The party's position was that there would be no war and if there was a war, the outcome did not matter. Nevertheless, they supported the Administration program for an increase of armaments. But never did they take the position, which Mr. Dewey thought of a few days ago, that the program was inadequate. Indeed the general attitude of Mr. Taft was that those who then wanted to arm the United States were unduly excited. Finally, they did everything they could by nagging and opposing the President to make ineffectual any diplomatic effort to avert the war; they did everything necessary, through such statesmen as Hamilton Fish, to assure Hitler that he could safely disregard America and go to war.

WHEN THE WAR broke out, the Republican Party,—with the exception of a small minority which, be it said, included Senator Taft,—stood for a policy which meant that the United States would deny to the Allies the right to purchase arms. They were beaten by public opinion but only after such a protracted struggle, and after the making of such destructive concessions, that it was too late to put American factories into mass production. Moreover, the Allies were afraid to place large orders because they had been persuaded in the Congressional debate that they must husband their cash. In this debate Senator Taft was more pedantic than anyone else in insisting that the Allies must never allow themselves the slightest reason to think that if their cash was exhausted, they might obtain credit.

This policy meant, if it meant anything, that the Republican Party was prepared to accept the consequences of Allied defeat. But never was it prepared to draw the obvious practical conclusion from this policy which is that America must arm mightily and at once. The party supported the Administration arms program but it never did what a patriotic opposition ought to have done—it never demanded a more adequate program. So sunk was Senator Taft in complacency that in the days after the Nazi breakthrough at Sedan, he expressed his regrets publicly that the American people were more interested in the war news on first three pages than in his criticism of the W. P. A. on page nine. And then to make sure that his record for total complacency and absolute incomprehension should be perfect, he was quoted a few days later as saying that if Hitler won, we could do business just as well with Hitler as we have done it previously with the British.

THIS MEANS that Senator Taft has learned nothing, perhaps because he has not been reading the first three pages and perhaps because he is too complacent to learn. Certainly it means that if he is nominated, the party which did not foresee the war, refused to try to prevent it, and then failed to offer leadership in improving American defenses, will cap the climax by doing nothing, when the stupendous things will need to be done, to organize this country to withstand the shocks and the dangers of a totalitarian victory and the totalitarian revolution which it is bringing about. The nomination of Mr. Taft or Mr. Dewey would mean that the Republican Party did not know how, and did not intend seriously, to prepare this country to defend its vital interests.

THERE IS NO solution at Philadelphia except a nomination which signifies the repudiation of this appalling record of indifference, complacency, unpreparedness, and of unconscionable appeal to laziness and ignorance. That repudiation will take place if Wendell Willkie is nominated because he is not the candidate of the politicians who made the record, because he has a record of his own that the people can respect, and because his nomination would be the kind of political miracle that the party must have if it is to be saved from a humiliating disaster.

The delegates at Philadelphia will do well to realize that the bulk of the American people have grasped the fact that the disaster in France and the tragic position of Great Britain are due to the politicians, both of the right and of the left, who for 20 years refused to look the facts in the face and always offered the people the easy and popular slogan. Those politicians abroad have wrecked democracy in Europe. Yet those politicians were fully as able and fully as patriotic as the politicians who have made the record which the Philadelphia convention is faced with.

Mr. Daladier is a far abler man than Mr. Dewey. But Mr. Dewey, like Mr. Daladier, is always more concerned with taking the popular position than he is in dealing with the real issue. Mr. Chamberlain is a far abler and more experienced man than Mr. Taft. But Mr. Taft has all the limitations of Neville Chamberlain, the same complacency, the same incapacity to foresee, the same apathy in action. Like Mr. Chamberlain he would, if elected, be as cruelly confused and frustrated a man as ever sat in the White House. Mr. Taft has admirable personal qualities. But to nominate him now and elect him now would be to invite for the nation a disaster of unpreparedness, for Mr. Taft personally a tragic ordeal.

With politicians of this sort to lead them democracy could not survive in Europe. Nor will it here.

Suggestions for Party Conventions

Lissen, boys.

How about starting all this matter of sacrifice and idealism and dedication to the national service on the convention floors?

The call everywhere—from national leaders, from college campus, from pulpit and rostrum—is for sacrifice; how about you politicians furnishing the example?

How about giving to America the novelty of delegates, orators and candidates for the Presidency of the United States, putting party success individual glorification and personal ambitions behind truth, fact-facing, the national interest and office seeking?

Look, Mr. Delegate:

Hasn't the lesson of Europe been enough to convince you that the dangers from oil, applesauce, trimming, vote hunting and general fiddling are too great to be indulged in for another five minutes?

Don't you suspect by this time that this year is no year for smart politics, clever convention tactics, artful dodging and loose-leaf expediency?

Hasn't it yet dawned on you boys that by November nobody will be under such suspicion from the American people as the candidate who is adroit, foxy, tricky or evasive?

Don't you know that nothing will sound so disgusting over the radio as platitudes, eulogies, adroitly framed speeches, two-way promises, assorted buncombe and anything that sounds like Pollyanna, Goody Two Shoes or Old-Mother Hubbard?

Listen, candidates:

After the debacle in Europe, caused largely by the total failure of governments to tell the people the whole truth, don't you realize that buck-passing, conniving and finagling are in the discard?

Don't you realize that the leader who depends on weather vanes, applause cards, trial balloons, etc., will soon be as obsolete as the bustle?

Doesn't it stand to reason that in this year of 1940 the people now want to know the worst, get the facts, and face the music?

Aren't you ready to admit that the candidate who says: "I stand for this, if it costs me a million votes," will probably make a set-up of any candidate who always considers political consehonest opinions and a completely square relationship with the time for straight-from-the-shoulquences first?

Does it make sense to assume that they want sugar-coated pills, back-slapping from the ward rose-colored glasses and continued election?

Huh?

An American Platform

By Dorothy Thompson

Philadelphia, June 24.

WE, THE PEOPLE of the United States, now, in the face of desperate times, swear and pledge each other with our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor, with the intelligence of our brains, the work of our hands and the strength and affection of our hearts, never to tolerate a foreign judge on this continent, and to hold to each other and support each other, come what may, that the American dream of freedom, of equality and of happiness may be realized by us and through us for mankind.

WE HOLD these truths to be self-evident; that man is a child of God and of nature; that, as every school-child sings in the national hymn, God is our King, and we are protected by his might, and all of our rights derive from him, and we are endowed with them only by our Maker.

We pledge allegiance to the truths that have been revealed to us in our most intimate personal experience; that we are all members one of another; that whatsoever we sow we shall reap; that men do not gather grapes of thorns or figs of thistles; that the Word is only a word until it is made flesh, and that neither in this mountain or in Jerusalem shall men worship the Father, but they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth.

We believe these words and others prayed by men for thousands of years, to be no mystic revelation of a world after death, but scientifically precise truths about the relations of men on earth. And we pledge and swear to each other that we shall make His Kingdom come on earth, as it is in Heaven.

We swear that we shall take the Christian idea, upon which this Nation was founded, out of the churches where it is enshrined and from under the bushel where it has stifled, and set it up on a candlestick on our common table, where it will give light to all the earth.

WE PRAY that we shall be forgiven our trespasses as we forgive them that trespass against us, regardless of what he has hitherto believed up to this moment. Conscious of our own innumerable errors, we hold against no man his previous actions within the law; we welcome to our fellowship, to our comradeship, to our great endeavor, those who have been conservatives, or liberals or radicals; those who have been Communists and those who have been Nazis; we welcome all the races of this Nation of races. We welcome the rich who care more for this cause than for their riches, and we welcome the poor for whom the democratic ideal shall be made a fleshly reality of work and bread and freedom and brotherhood. For we, too, are prepared to cast off the old man, and be renewed.

WENDELL WILLKIE
His sensational boom is the outstanding phenomenon of the wholly unbossed Republican convention, says Mark Sullivan in his dispatch from Philadelphia

WE KNOW only one enemy; those who preach hatred amongst brothers, those who incite creed against creed, race against race, shifting class against shifting class, nation against nation.

We shall free speech in to an instrument of discussion amongst free, reasonable and affectionate men and women. We shall cleanse it of its abasement into an instrument of internecine war.

We shall free assembly into an open forum, where all may present their views according only to the rules of human courtesy and the right of differences to be heard from every floor.

We shall free the press into an instrument for the dissemination of honest information and open, responsible criticism, instead of an instrument of sensationalism, gossip, agitation and anonymous propaganda.

We shall free individual citizens from the impertinent pryings of the press and establish for them the right of privacy in their homes and their personal relations.

We shall free the collective conscience into the impelling power of a new society.

WE SHALL make real the prayer, "Give us this day our daily bread." To that end we demand that the resources of this Nation, of this soil upon which we all live, whether in public or in private hands, shall be recognized as communal wealth and be fully mobilized to the end that every child shall be fed, clothed and educated according to his abilities and according to the communal need; that every man and woman shall have the necessities of life, consisting of decent food, clothing and shelter, provided they are willing to work; that they shall be free in their choice of work, but encouraged and assisted in retraining, if their choice lies in an overcrowded field.

In the attainment of this goal we shall follow no patented formula and no preconceived prejudices, believing that it is the spirit which quickeneth. We shall move with an eye toward objective reality, using to the fullest possible extent the existing organizations, but coordinating all of them into the service of the common aim. But we shall move with disregard of all vested interests, financial, economic or political.

We shall recognize the differences of ability in men, the inequalities ordained in nature, but we shall seek to lift the less gifted to an ever higher level and to ennoble the more gifted by the crown of service, and we shall recognize that in one thing all are equal, that all must eat and be sheltered and clothed, and live in a society they can trust.

For the ambition of monetary success we shall substitute the ambition of fame, the desire to be thought well of by mankind, and to hand on to one's children the heritage of a luminous past.

WE ARE the children of Europe and Africa, and Asia. We are the New World.

We swear and pledge each other that we shall build on this continent the New World. We swear that on this soil we shall make living reality and use of the religion that came to us from Asia, of the slumbering innocent vitality which came to us from Africa, of the manifold talents and gifts that have come to us from all the races and nations of Europe.

We swear that we shall be the hospitable synthesis of that deathless attachment to freedom which is the glory of the British; of that humane dignity which is the ornament of the French; of that mystic imagination which is the gift of the Slavs; of that robust and truculent poetry which is the characteristic of the Irish; of that superb sense of work and order which is the talent of the Germans; of that furious love of justice which is the mission of the Jews.

We shall say to the English among us, temper your pride; to the French: Widen your sympathies; to the Germans: Relax your stubborness; to the Slavs: Realize your dreams; to the Irish: Forget past wrongs; to the Jews: Abandon your fears, which are so easily transformed into arrogance; to the Negroes: Give us your innocent faith in life and God.

WE SWEAR that the time shall never come when Americans will flee in fear from fellow Americans; when terror will be a horror worse than war; when revenge will be visited by neighbor upon neighbor for differences of past or present opinion.

We shall hold fast to the concept of law. We shall tolerate no retroactive "justice," which is only persecution.

We pledge allegiance to our God and to the flag which flies in His cause, with its firmament of expanding stars, its stripes of brave red blood and clean white purity of motive.

We swear that wherever men suffer from any cruel humiliation on this globe that flag shall be for them the symbol of faith, hope and charity. We swear that never shall it be a symbol of terror and oppression.

We swear that we shall defend this new world in the making—with the universal service of work for our youth; with the universal service of defense against all who would destroy us before we are reborn, and in the certain conviction that when this Nation stands united in such a faith and working in such a reality it will drawn all nations of men on to it.

WHO ARE WE? We are the coming American revolution, born last in a revolutionary world. The light which we shall shed is flickering isolatedly in millions of hearts. We are groping our way toward each other, and we shall find each other, very quickly. Who will be our President? No one whom we select, but he who selects us.

I dreamed in a dream," said Walt Whitman, "that I saw a city invincible to the attacks of the whole of the rest of the earth. I dreamed that was the new city of friends.

Written on the opening day of the Republican convention, not by myself, but out of the cries of unknown Americans who pour out their longing and faith in letters and ask me to articulate their hopes for them. And written out of words spoken to me in Europe by men who look to America as the last hope. Written in the Year of Our Lord 1940.

DorothyThompson Column Corrected

In Monday's Dorothy Thompson article the phrase, "the middle classes put Hitler into power and the other people have been eliminated by his program" should have read, "but they are the people who have been eliminated." The phrase, "They do not argue with Mr. Dewey" should have read, "they do not agree with Mr. Dewey."

Large Kitchens Offer Extra Home Space

Large, old-fashioned kitchens offer many possibilities for modernization. If less space is desirable, a big kitchen can be easily divided off into several units with the aid of funds obtained from qualified lending institutions.

Surplus kitchen area may be converted into any one of the following uses: dining alcove, household office with planning desk and telephone extension, pantry or storeroom, downstairs lavatory, or closets for clothing or cleaning materials.

Kitchen Should Be Well Illuminated

Since the workshop of the average housewife is the kitchen, that room should be well illuminated. It is vitally important that the kitchen be free from glare and shadows. Planners suggest that supplementary lighting fixtures be used in addition to the usual central velling fixture.

A general recommendation for adequate kitchen lighting is the installation of fixtures for over-all illumination and special lights at the range, refrigerator, and sink work centers.

SEALING IT WITH HOT IRON AND ASPHALT

SWEPT CLEAN TO PROVE THEIR WORTH

Staff Photos—Schumacher.

Something new in traffic "buttons" was installed at two downtown Washington intersections yesterday to test its worth as a crosswalk marker.

The innovation is a disc of "calcibrite," a new material said by its manufacturers to be more permanent than cement, resistant to acid and alkali and unaffected by temperature or moisture.

H. J. Larsen and A. R. Taylor, traffic and consulting engineers of the chemical division of the Koppers Co., Pittsburgh, Pa., are here to aid J. W. Storer, of the Traffic Department, in supervising the work.

An outstanding feature of the calcibrite "button" is its self-cleaning quality. The action of automobile tires keep the material polished, Larsen said

With special equipment, the discs were imbedded in the asphalt at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue and at John Marshall place and Pennsylvania avenue. (See strip at right.)

At the Fourteenth street intersection, markers were placed on 100 feet of crosswalk. On the avenue at John Marshall place, discs colored yellow were placed over 50 feet. The "buttons" sell for $30 per hundred

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer is watching the experiment with interest. He said if the new markers prove practical they may be used throughout the city to replace painted white lines. "I think," said Van Duzer, "they will prove more economical than paint in the long run."

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

The Short-Reel Shakes Custard Out of Mane

Picture Patrons Have Ample Cause to Rejoice; Two New Downtown Bills Open Today; This, That and the Other About the Theater

IT IS NOT too difficult to remember—especially for those with arthritis crackling in their joints and the hair, if any, turning gray around the suburbs—when virtually all the motion picture exhibitor had to offer in the way of "complements of the feature," was a "scenic," a travelog, a newsreel or a goofy, short-reel comedy.

BELL

The "scenic" and the travelog were pretty apt to overlap as mere successions of purty pitchers, chopped up into short "takes" to make room for printed subtitles couched in grandiose wordage that tried to match its subject matter in limpid beauty. The newsreels were similarly bogged down with titles and so were the comedies. These latter, more often than not, were bogged down with more than that, yet occasionally they used to knock the customers right out of their pews and roll them up in hilarious heaps at the foot of the aisles. Seems incredible.

But don't get me wrong. I loved those old slapsticks—along with everybody else, although, along with them, too, no doubt, I often wonder why. This, of course, doesn't include Chaplin, Harold Lloyd or, on occasion, Buster Keaton, Harry Langdon and the Sennett mob in its diminuendos. But there is still a shudder or two in some of the recollections of Larry Semon, Lloyd Hamilton, Jimmy Aubrey, Fatty Arbuckle and the rest of the custard pie boys—and girls.

Which is to say, more or less in the words of David Warfield in "The Music Master," "the world has revolved a few times" since those old splashy, silent days. The public ought to remember that in this era when the short subject has become so important and so sane that more than one of the major producers get out slick paper magazines about their abbreviated productions every week or so. Take the Warner Brothers' 1940-41 short-reel release schedule, for example. More than half of the 18 two-reel subjects and the 66 single-reelers will be in color. The same production values that went into the making of 1938's Academy Award winner, "Sons of Liberty," will be perpetuated in three "American Cavalcade" releases, "The Fall of the Alamo," "The Unknown Soldier" and "Songs of America." Three musical comedy featurettes will be done in color, with top-ranking stars, and Elsa Maxwell will toss in three two-reel comedies. You can't turn up a custard pie, a slapstick or an inflated bladder in the whole 86. Name your own Thanksgiving Day!

More early-week program changes coming up. "Twenty-one Days Together" having seemed a few too many, the Metropolitan this morning will unfurl "Brother Orchid," the neatly turned comedy-melodrama, starring Edward G. Robinson, supported by Humphrey Bogart, Ann Sothern, Ralph Bellamy, Donald Crisp, Allen Jenkins, Granville Bates and a total roster longer than you have been in town. This evening, at the Little Theater, a revival preview of Walter Wanger's "Algiers," with Charles Boyer, Sigrid Gurie and Hedy Lamarr heading the cast, will follow final showings of Conrad Veidt's peregrinations as "The Wandering Jew." Although Miss Gurie acts rings around Miss Lamarr in this gripping North African subject, it still stands in many minds as the picture that made the maligned star of "Ecstasy" Hollywood's No. 1 glamour gal. So there they are and you can't go wrong on either one.

Ben Hecht is coming back to the celluloid races with a three-play commitment. With only a leading woman remaining to be selected among the top players, he will put "Before I Die" into production at Columbia this week. Douglas Fairbanks, jr., is the star, with Thomas Mitchell and John Qualen in principal supporting roles. Mr. Hecht's only connection with the piece is as author, producer and director—with young Doug as his associate in the second notch.

Dots and Dashes

From Lou Smith, erstwhile coproducer with Frank Lloyd of "If I Were King," starring Ronald Colman, and now with Columbia Pictures: "Leaving for the East this week and expect to be in Washington about July 2. Look forward to seeing you then" . . . That makes it a tie . . . Fourth summer season of Paul Green's magnificent historical drama, "The Lost Colony," opens at the Waterside Theater, Roanoke Island, this Saturday . . . Inaugurates the 353d anniversary celebrations of the founding of the island colonies and the birth of Virginia Dare—the first English girl born on American soil, not the bottled goods. . . . Comes a pretty postage card from Joe and Min Kaliski, long members of the Washington motion picture colony, saying in part, "Of all places, look where we landed!" . . . Syracuse is the postmark. . . . Well, what's wrong with that, beyond being too far off base? . . . The Roxyettes aren't the only Warner vacationers. . . . Bill Ewing, of the publicity department, and family are two-weeksing in New Hampshire's verdant hills—if that is what they are . . . We've never been closer than Lake George.

And-That-Reminds-Me Note

Hains Point is okay, too!

In Hollywood

Hollywood, June 24.

The only newspaperman who ever became an actor is Walter Winchell—who made two pictures and decided he didn't like Hollywood so well. But the role of headline hunter has done more to make stars of our actors than any other one type.

HOPPER

One of Gary Cooper's first roles was that of a reporter, Tyrone Power and Don Ameche were both unkown till they played newshawks in "Love Is News."

When Bill Powell did "Libeled Lady" he was slipping—that reporter job brought him back; "The Front Page" made Pat O'Brien a top flight star but when Howard Hughes cast him for it—he thought he was getting Lee Tracy, who originated the part on Broadway; same picture gave Adolphe Menjou a new lease on movie life; and Cary Grant's newspaper personalities have always been among his best—his latest with Rox Russell in "His Girl Friday."

Yes, the boys with the quick comebacks and hats on the backs of their heads will always be fascinating picture stuff.

Jack Benny's "Rochester" kicked around here for ten years before he got his break. Was a tremendous hit in an all-colored show, but his name didn't mean a thing till Jack Benny put him on the live end of an audition microphone.

Patricia Morison's success story started in New York when she got a part in Marc Connolly's "Two Bouquets" because she could sing "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes" (which she had learned as understudy in "Victoria Regina"), with an English accent. The play was not a success, but it brought Patricia a Paramount contract.

Dorothea Kent once had quite a comedy reputation and was going places when a serious operation slowed her down. When she recovered, Hollywood forgot. Her bit part in "Cross-Country Romance," with Wendy Barrie, means a new start.

Henry Wilcoxon has a new show horse, John Blount, named for one of Cecil Blount DeMille's ancestors by that name, in honor of C. B. who brought Henry to America.

FUNNY BUT IT'S TRUE. In 1911, Cecil B. DeMille's brother, William, wrote the following letter to Producer David Belasco: "It seems a shame that Mary Pickford is thinking of going into motion pictures. She is throwing her career in the ash-can and burying herself in a cheap form of amusement. There will never be any real money in the galloping tin types and never, by any stretch of the imagination, can they be called art" . . . Well, William, what she has isn't hay!

The Rest of the Bags Will Be Along in a Minute!

Hoyt Farce Is Nicely Treated By Roadsiders

'A Black Sheep' Is Second Bill Of Hayloft Season

By Richard L. Coe

Waal, sar, thar was a-singin' 'n' a-drinkin' a-pulenty 'bout sundown time in that ole red baan on the Rockville pike yesterday. "A Black Sheep," with its settings in Tombstone, Ariz., and in New York, N. Y. ("The Tombstone of the East"), was revived by those tireless resuscitators of the drammer, the Roadside Theater Players.

All the drinking—except out in the cow pasture between the acts—took place on the stage, to be sure, but the first act interpolation of "Casey Jones" into Charles H. Hoyt's 46-year-old play whetted audience whistling and sharpened no end the story of the lad who valued the sages of the desert above the sophists of the city.

True to Roadside tradition, the second play of the season is a straight comedy—well, more or less. It is not, like its 98-year-old predecessor, "The Sealed Wall," a story of bloody villainy, but rather a tale whose comparative youth makes it powerfully like a small-town, Saturday night movie. The villain's villainy is of a polite Mauve Decadian sort. But in Roadside's accomplished metier and with Bibby (Margaret) Osterwald's convulsing "Casey Jones," it affords an evening of giddy pleasure.

Fearless Journalism in West

Take, for instance, Richard T. Walsh's resourceful Editor Gunning, of the Tombstone Inscription, that fearless journal which goes to press with such nerve-wracking rapidity and whose circulation motto is "Subscribe or Else." Editor Gunning (and he always is) wants to rid Tombstone of Hot Stuff, a black sheep, who has been left two million dollars by Aunt Cleopatra if he: (1) never again goes west of the Mississippi; (2) marries his full-blown cousin within a year; (3) gets a taste of European culture.

Now Hot Stuff's averse to this, but two million being two million, he swallows his pride, takes some of Tombstone's more colorful figures and a stranded theatrical troupe to his Fifth Avenue mansion and prepares to marry his not unattractive cousin.

Percy Vere, another cousin, wants the money and the girl for himself and that lady proves to be something of a Trojan mare. Lida, the Queen of Burlesque; Under Dog, Hot Stuff's companion; Hyde Sinn, a collection agent; Count Smoritork and Aspen, manager of "The Flying Spider" company, are some of the others involved, which should give you an idea of the company our friends keep.

Miss Osterwald Scores

The dignified editor is rapturously played by Richard Walsh and you'll know when he sets forth his instructions on love-making to a willing pupil. Herbert Lupton is exactly right as the abashed, always-a-lady-for-a-quick-one hero Lansing Hall seems a trifle too well-bred to be a gay nineties burlesque queen (you know what they were!). Macubbin Waters and Emmy-Jane Harbin are successfully hateful as the designing relations and Kenn Romney has a lot of fun as Under Dog.

But it was Miss Osterwald's songs, "Casey" in particular, that won "A Black Sheep" our fealty. Others in Director Ralph Fowler's large company include Ted Projector, Paul J. Sears, William Zuckert, Alice Gartell, Keith Adamson, Edward Prescott, Paul Tisdale, William W. Holst and Beatrice Allen. That pillar of the ixories, Betty Gray, is again at the piano these next two weeks and Dorothy Croissant has contributed some happy costuming.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, June 24.

POLITICS: Last fall, when the leading Presidential candidates of the time attended the dinner at the National Press Club, SEC Commissioner Leon Henderson offered to wager each one that the nomination would not go to any of them present. Henderson, the New Deal economist, tempted them with 5 to 1 odds, but none would accept . . . This week Harry Hopkins saw Henderson, now a member of the National Defense Council, and offered 1 to 10 that Leon couldn't name five men—any one of whom would win the Republican nomination. "Ten to one?" Henderson pondered. "Well, I don't need a buck that bad." And so the bet wasn't made.

THEATER DEPT.: In "American Jubilee," at the N. Y. World's Fair, Ray Middleton plays the role of "Mr. X," the U. S. President of the future. As Mr. X, Mr. Middleton's line is: "I may be a Republican or a Democrat, but above all I am an American" . . . Middleton may be a Democrat, but he vacationed from the show for one day, to open the Republican convention in Philadelphia, by singing the "Ballad for Americans."

EMPLOYMENT DEPARTMENT: Ben Turpin the veteran star of silent movies, received an offer from Billy Rose to appear in his Barbary Coast revue. Turpin, whose crossed eyes once had brought him fame in slapstick comedies, accepted the offer, and wired: "Okay. What do you want me to do?" . . . "What can you do?" Rose inquired . . . "All I can do," Turpin confessed, "is look cockeyed" . . . "The deal's off," Rose informed him. "There's no more future in that."

TRAVEL DEPT.: Fritz Thyssen, the German munitions man who helped in the rise of Hitler and then fled from Germany, authorized one of his N. Y. friends to secure official consent for his seeking a haven here, as a political refugee. The Government, however, was not amenable.

LABOR DEPT.: At the M-G-M studios, which released the new anti-Nazi film, "The Mortal Storm," some of the writers grouped near a radio and spent their time listening to news dispatches from Europe instead of paying attention to their jobs . . . Charles Lederer saw the group, and told them: "From the way things are going, Hollywood now is a lack-of-concentration camp."

TRAVEL DEPARTMENT: Bob Sweeny, the former fiance of Barbara Hutton, made one of the most expensive taxi trips of the year, to catch the clipper which brought him to New York, where he immediately took a plane for California, to see Barbara for a short time . . . Sweeny was unable to book passage on any trip from Paris to Lisbon, and couldn't rent a car. He therefore hired a cabbie to drive him there. The taxi bill was 12,000 francs.

DRAMA DEPT.: Clifton Webb, who portrayed the Alexander Woollcott, in a wheelchair, for the Chicago company of "The Man Who Came to Dinner," visited Woollcott's room while the latter was en route to a Syracuse doctor after he had been stricken in California . . . Webb hadn't seen Alec perform in the Coast company of that show. When he entered the room he saw the ailing Woollcott sitting in a wheelchair. "Come, come, Alec," was Webb's greeting, "stop pretending that you're still on."

FASHIONS DEPT.: Irving Hoffman tells the story of an asylum patient who baffled the psychiatrists by tearing whatever clothes were placed upon his person. One doctor finally evolved a plan for making the patient curb his clothes-tearing rampages. "I've got a job for you, at 25 cents a day," the doctor offered . . . "All right, what's the job?" the patient asked . . . "Your job will be to stop tearing your clothes." The patient agreed, and for five days he dutifully refrained from tearing his clothes, receiving his daily wage of 25 cents. On the sixth day the doctor again met with success, and paid—but on the seventh day he was distressed to discover that the patient had torn off all his clothes . . . "You fell down on your job," the psychiatrist reprimanded . . . "Oh, no, I didn't," the patient calmly informed. "It's just that I never work on Sundays."

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

(While Louella O. Parsons is on her Honolulu vacation, this column is being written by her daughter, Harriett Parsons, producer of Screen Snapshots.)

Hollywood, June 24 (INS).—Lana Turner's first honest-to-goodness starring vehicle will be Booth Tarkington's "Presenting Lily Mars." Lana's bosses at M-G-M may not always approve wholeheartedly of their fledgling star's off-screen conduct, but reservations there are no in their enthusiasm about her behavior before the cameras. They're convinced the curvacious hedhead is headed for the top, and, after seeing her in "Two Girls on Broadway," I agree.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

The Tarkington novel, which Metro bought a couple of years ago, has a "Pygmalion" theme. It tells of a playwright who transforms an ordinary little shop girl into one of the most glamorous actresses on Broadway and in so doing falls in love with her. Lana certainly ought to be able to "feel" the role of Lily Mars, for it's not so long since she was just a little high school girl avidly reading the movie news. Now she makes it.

Now, don't go completely overboard, you femme fans. Just take this in your stride. Not only will you have Errol Flynn in "Santa Fe Trail," but John Wayne as well.

John caused a sensation in "Stagecoach" and proved it was no fluke by his more recent performance in "Dark Command." He's under contract to Republic, but Warners will borrow him for the next-to-top male role in the "Santa Fe" epic, which stars Flynn. Errol returns shortly from South America, where he has made a terrific hit. His pal and traveling companion, Johnny Meyer, writes me from Rio de Janeiro: "I have never seen such crowds in all my life—absolute riots. The papers here said it was twice the number of people that greeted Gable and Power combined." I might suspect the loyal Johnny of being prejudiced, if he didn't go on to tell me that he has pictures to back up his contention—and if I didn't know Errol's fatal charm.

Snopshots of Hollywood collected at random: Barbara Read won't get that Mexican divorce from Laguna Beach artist William Paul. She'll file papers here, instead, after she gets set for a couple of pictures; the Linda Darnell-Frank Swann twosome is getting to be routine; Ma Hardy, also known as Fay Holden, today celebrates 26 years of being wed—not to Judge Hardy but to Andy Clyde's brother Dave; Jeannette MacDonald's nephew, Earle Wallace, who's been living with Jeannette's mother, got married Saturday to Patricia Murphy of Hawaii.

Patricia Morison flew to New York today to meet two kid cousins, a 14-year-old boy and a 16-year-old girl, who are arriving from London. She'll bring them to Hollywood; Maureen O'Hara's mother, anxious about her husband and other children in Ireland, has booked passage July 15 on the Lisbon-bound Clipper.

That's all today. L. O. P.'s back with a scoop-hungry glint in her eye. So far, I've been able to beat her to the typewriter, but it won't be long.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman Boss Goads Worker to Nervous Breakdown Another to Hysteria, Third to Chronic Confusion; Her Private Secretary Asks How to Cope With Her

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: How does one cope with a difficult woman whose secretary one is? Her contradictory, inadequate and incessant instructions; her consistent failure to explain the underlying purpose of a job; her determination to oversee every insignificant detail of the work; her insistence on her method of handling every phase of office routine; her inability to allow a clerk to complete a given job, unhindered and uninterrupted; her irritation when a specified job is not completed within a stipulated time, although the delay is due to her assigning the clerk to a conflicting task; her apparent assumption that all employes have an I. Q. little higher than a moron's; her alternate spells of extreme talkativeness and almost surly silence; her cutting remarks; overbearing, critical and dictatorial manner; her lack of consideration and general pettiness, have driven one clerk into a nervous breakdown, another to hysteria, destroyed the self confidence of a third, and made her unpopular throughout the organization.

Her behavior is not attributable to ill health, financial difficulties, domestic troubles, nor to that whipping boy of the feminine sex, the climacteric.

The obvious solution is to resign the job. And the obvious objection to the obvious solution is that jobs which pay as well are not easily come by. Pride, too, is a factor. After years of working, without friction, for and with many persons of varied and difficult temperaments, it is disconcerting, to say the least, to meet someone with whom it seems impossible to get along—disconcerting and challenging.

The alternative to resigning is to find some method of meeting the situation without anger and without inner tension. Any suggestions will be gratefully received. Sincerely yours, EVA.

Saint's Strength Needed In Shrew's Service

DEAR EVA: I imagine that only a religious —— (i. e., one dedicated to the practice of piety for its own sake) would have the incentive which in turn would beget the capacity to adjust, with spiritual serenity (and hence with personal and communal profit) to so scourging a ttask-mistress.

This woman, as you describe her, would tax the spiritual resources even of a St. Theresa, whose joyous sufferance of petty vexations in her Savior's name was wellnigh unparalleled in Christian history; and added up to treasury-in-Heaven from which lesser souls, having faith in her miraculous power to give saintly help from on high, continually borrow.

Having no desire to be a saint; being only an approbation-loving, prideful human personality (as are most who toil for monetary recompense or popular acclaim in the world's vineyards and market places), your nature (like that of your confreres and predecessors) is too little sustained by that powerful, indestructible inner poise or peace (which derives from the source known to us as God) to withstand in healthful, total equanimity this woman's "incessant" waspish aggression.

Because, in personality, you are (in company with the majority of mankind) more "surface" than "substance," it is inevitable that your employer would, by her unthinking hostility, rapidly wear your defences down to the point where you have no integrated force left with which to endure—much less disarm and thus, possibly, correct—her mistaken attitudes.

Such is the picture as I see it. And if I see it aright, you have no self-protective alternative other than resigning the job. It is folly to reckon personal security, advancement or gain in terms of money only, particularly when, as in this instance, your last reserves of psychic and nervous energy are being rapidly drained as you grapple for a few more dollars in your pay envelope each week.

A stitch in time, we are told, saves nine. And a downhill course, in health as in all else, is more imperceptibly transversed than is the upward climb of equal distance. The time, money, energy and effort-of-will you would need to expend in repairing (and likely never fully reclaiming) your health, if it should be partially wrecked in the service of the dollar (which you miscall service of this employer), would be far greater than any loss you would sustain in foresightedly negotiating happier circumstances of employment.

In order to make distinguished or personally satisfactory progress at any task, it is necessary (1) to love one's work; (2) to find the atmosphere and auspices which evoke one's creative energies to the utmost; and (3) thereafter, to be allowed a "free hand," up to the extent of one's capacity to discharge a designated responsibility in the most effective way. And it seems to me that your present set-up denies you conditions No. 2 and 3, and, possibly, condition No. 1, also—as I cannot conceive of one's loving his work (however intrinsically congenial) while detesting his employer.

So, in the positive interest of self-expression, as well as in the negative interest of self-protection, I advise you to abandon this situation and find the better one where your energies and talents will be given fuller play. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Play Clothes Represent Highest Achievement of U. S. Designers

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor.

THERE'S BEEN a lot of talk lately about the brilliant performance of native designers in creating all-American fashions, but actually their most vital contribution has been in the styling of play clothes. The British woman may retain her leadership in tweeds, the French woman in her subtle "haute couture" originals but it is the American who has created the need for varied play costumes and stimulated interest in them.

MARSHALL ADAMS

The reason for such rapid progress in American play clothes designing is the growing feminine appreciation of all kinds of sports. The lady executive has found time to rid her mind of conferences and weekly reports long enough to rival her boss at golf; the budget-salaried shopgirl plays tennis, goes horseback riding on her day off, even learns badminton, while schoolgirls everywhere hike, swim, sail, bicycle or play softball in imitation of the great American sport—baseball.

Washington—Play Conscious

Washington's play enthusiasts are more high voltaged than any in the country. Get up an hour earlier next Sunday or tumble out of bed this morning for a stroll down to the play mecca, the Tidal Basin. Or take a quick dash out to Rock Creek Park. You'll find a quarter of the active health-devouring Government employes sitting a horse almost as well as the First Lady, bicycling like mad, having a fling at archery, or getting an early morning start at walking to work.

As a matter of fact, Washington's 80-odd miles of bridal path is the longest of any public park system; probably more rounds of nine-hole golf (450,000 last year) were played on municipal links here tha non similar courses, and over 100,000 rides were made on Potomac Park bicycles alone, not counting those made on privately-owned "wheels."

Sanforized Clothes Popular

Certainly the chic, often penny-wise play clothes for these sports, foster itnerest in the outdoor life for not only are are they gay, lighthearted and becoming to almost every type, but they have never been more functional in their appeal. Fabrics themselves are so cagily styled that usually they determine the individual sport and thus are given a water-repellant bath, a bleach, a lacquer finish or sun and color fastness as the sport requires.

The sanforized-shrunk washable guarantee in particular has become so important in play fashions that almost every woman now looks for that little tag assuring her that weekly tubbings won't mar size or texture. Play cottons marked "shrinkage controlled to 1 per cent" have almost as authoritative a selling appeal for the play addict as the charm of the design itself, a combination hard to beat with the sports lover.

Fatigue Is Worst Enemy Of Beauty, Says 'Scarlett'

Vivian Leigh Found Rest Aid In Playing Part

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOU saw "Gone With the Wind"—and if you didn't it's only a question of time—you probably came away wondering whether Scarlett got her man back. Well, you can take it from Vivien Leigh that she hadn't a chance!

Of course, the main point of an interview with Miss Leigh was to find out about her waistline exercises—but it was so hard to separate Vivien from Scarlett that there were some things about Scarlett that had to be asked first.

What does she think of Scarlett? Well, Miss Leigh isn't quite sure, but she doesn't believe that Scarlett could ever change and become a better girl. She loved her for her courage, but disliked her intensely for her cruelty. If her mother had lived, she thinks Scarlett would have turned out better.

Like Scarlett Should Look

Vivien really looks like Scarlett should have looked. She has enormous gray-green eyes that flew open when I asked: "Do you take waistline calesthencis?"

"Take WHAT!" she asked:

"Calesthenics, you know, twists, turns and bends". I explained.

"Oh, those—why no," she replied, but added, thoughtfully, "I suppose I'll have to one day".

So her tiny waistline is natural and without benefit of exercise, unless you call golf, walking, swimming, fencing and dancing exercise! A 23-inch waistline is never an accident. Miss Leigh plays at some outdoor sport whenever she gets a chance and believes that ballet dancing is essential to grace, suppleness and good posture, and terribly important for anyone who wants to become an actress.

She has no beauty secrets except "to wash one's face a lot." In her opinion their is nothing that gives one that fresh look like plenty of soap and water.

Washing and More Washing

She removes makeup with cold cream, but washes her face morning, noon and night, and in between! And she looks as fresh and young as Scarlett did at the first, but she says that after working on the picture for 22 weeks, she was so dead tired that when the beginning scenes were retaken, she looked like a different person—years older!

So she had to rest before she looked young enough to play the carefree Scarlett. And that convinced her that fatigue is the biggest factor in a woman's apparent age.

Vivien Leigh has a terrific amount of energy and drive. She eats up hard work and believes that it is impossible to be an actress without hard work.

Emphatically, Miss Leigh does not diet—says she is far too greedy to diet! She claims she eats quantities of food—milk, lots of fruits, vegetables and plenty of nice rich foods, too, but added that she forgets to eat when she is working hard. She doesn't take the time to eat—acting is so much more important to her. So that's the answer to her 103 pounds for her 5 feet 3½ inches of height.

My parting question was: "Are you quite sure Scarlett doesn't get Rhett back maybe after a while?"

"Well, maybe," she laughed, "but I don't think Scarlett deserved to get him back."

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, June 24.

LONG A booster for the looks, charm and tact of the girls who ride the air lines ministering to the customers, I'm glad to see that the aviation business has gotten around to picking a queen of the business — though it does seem a little tough on the rest of the ladies. Spouse Hall says he favors electing the whole lot of them queen, and be done with it.

ALICE HUGHES

As you may know, the new head is Margaret Mellon, and a very pretty head it is, too. She hails from Louisiana, and she seems to know all the answers in the matter of her job, which calls for a lot of high-class diplomacy. Miss Margaret says the primary rule in the handling of all masculine clients is to make them feel important, which is an excellent maxim in the air or on the ground. Puff up a fellow in a discreet way, with no machinery showing, and he positively purrs.

Margaret says that quite a number of the boys attempt dates, which calls for a quick switch of the subject, or a hurried move to fix a distant ventilator. Or to check with the co-pilot on something. Of course, no boy can be ruled off for trying, and those with little experience in the air figure that there is more than professional warmth in the smile of the aerial pillow-fixer. That, of course, is where he is wrong. Miss Mellon assures me.

The stewardess has to learn quickly the various types of male passenger, and his manner of approach. Margaret says they fall into definite classes, and that she can almost spot them as they come up the gangway. Oddly enough, the queen says the fellow who asks nothing and positively drips appeal is the type she dreads most, because he is so nice. The curly wolves she can handle more easily. Yep, any girl with man-trouble would do well to consult a knowledgeable airline stewardess, like Queen Margaret the First.

War Fails to Keep Women at Home In Fashion Hunt

Hollywood, Calif., June 24.—War may keep women on their own side of the fence, but they may still take a world tour in clothes. There are dashing numbers from the Tyrol, Russian hats still hold sway, Greece offers ancient and modern models, the Orient sends us jewels and Bali gives us exotic turbans.

Hungarian peasants and South Sea island natives influence play wear. Olivia de Havilland's short-skirted frock is yellow linen with homespun apron banded in brilliant red. Ann Sheridan's sarong slacks show small white star-fish on a sea green ground in heavy shantung.

Spain Is a Style Source

With so much of the rest of the world blacked out, Portugal and Spain are becoming important style sources, in the decorative world. From Portugal come interesting native adaptations of English furniture. While Spain goes back to either the seventeenth century or else presents a modern Victorian mode. In both countries there is much activity in home furnishings circles—in Spain to repair damage of war; in Portugal, to provide accommodations for many more visitors than usual.

Sour Cream Gives Tangy Flavor to Potato Salad

POTATO SALAD seems to be a popular food. Scarcely a day goes by that I do not receive a call asking me how to make some variety of it—Sour Cream Potato Salad, German Potato Salad with Bacon, Cold Buffet Potato Salad are all among the requests.

There are endless ways of varying potato salad, such as the addition of white wine; carrots and Bismarck herring cut in small pieces; a very special one with pickles, nuts, beets and hard-cooked eggs.

Sour Cream Potato Salad is one variety with a very special tang. The following recipe for making it was given me by Helen Sellars, who learned to make it from her Pennsylvania Dutch grandmother.

SOUR CREAM POTATO SALAD

Cook medium sized potatoes in the jackets. When cold, peel the potatoes and cut into small cubes. Combine 2 teaspoons each of vinegar and lemon juice. Then add 2 tablespoons of grated onion and 2 tablespoons chopped parsley, and 1 cup thick sour cream. Season with salt to taste and a dash of paprika. Add 2 tablespoons pimento, ½ cup chopped dill pickle, and ¼ cup chopped crisp bacon to the potatoes. Toss together with the sour cream mixture and chill. Serve on crisp lettuce. Serves 6.

Beauty Secrets

By CAROLYN ABBOTT

Make-Up After 30

AFTER 30 a woman's beauty largely depends upon exercises and corrective make-up. Her secrets lie in make-up rules exclusive to her own age group.

A teen-ager, endowed with natural coloring, is allowed the privilege of going without cosmetic touches if she pleases, but this is denied the woman past 30. For one thing, the mature woman needs a foundation cream. It should be applied in small dots over the entire face and blended evenly with the finger tips.

The placement of rouge is important. Too much and too vivid a color adds age. All rouge should be softly diffused and applied so deftly that no line of demarcation is visible.

With increasing age the skin darkens gradually, so choose a powder to blend perfectly with the skin tones and never a lighter shade, which is aging.

The lips are tell-tales of all character changes and have a tendency to grow thinner as the years add up. Wield a lip brush to outline a slightly fuller mouth, spread a thin film of white vaseline over the lips for that younger shine, and blot with a tissue.

U. S. Cancels Sailing Order, Keeps Cruiser in Montevideo

(Copyright by New York Times)

Montevideo, June 24.—The United States cruiser Quincy today received orders not to sail tomorrow morning as scheduled. No announcement was made either by the Uruguayan authorities or the United States legation as to the reason, nor was any date announced for its departure.

The cruiser Wichita is due to arrive here June 29 and will remain until July 3 and it is rumored the Navy Department intends eventually to have four cruisers in South Atlantic waters.

Meanwhile, Nazi sympathizers in the Uruguayan Congress won an important tactical victory today when the special committee which has been studying Nazi activities presented a half dozen bills of innocuous measures, instead of the energetic remedies they had originally intended to recommend for combating the Nazi peril, which had been proven by committee's investigation.

During the last three days there has been strong organized opposition in the Chamber of Deputies to any measures which might offend the Germans. The investigating committee, fearing the political significance which might result from the defeat of any of its projects, chose not to run this risk and brought in proposals they think cannot be opposed because they simply provide, in a general way, for the defense of the country's sovereignty.

It was reported from Buenos Aires that the press gag clause in Argentina's proposed anti-Nazi law has caused the closing down of the newspaper El Sol, only publication in the morning field, which had assumed an energetic attitude toward Fifth Column activities in Argentina.

Since the bill already has been passed in the Chamber of Deputies it seems certain to pass in the Senate, and the owner today announced the suspension of El Sol, rather than change its policy to avoid the press gag which bars criticism of the government of any country with which Argentina maintains diplomatic relations.

The bill also provides for the registration and strict control of all foreign correspondents. Uruguay's anti-Nazi law also puts a close government control over newspapers and broadcasting stations.

Among the bills proposed by the Uruguayan investigating committee in this afternoon's session of the Chamber of Deputies is one providing for the expropriation, as state property, of all hilltops in the republic following the discovery that Germans have been trying to buy sites on several hilltops, which would provide excellent lookout stations along the coast.

The investigating committee's original project to present a bill providing for the reorganization and strict control of all educational programs was toned down to apply only to privately owned schools, thus leaving college and university professors in Uruguayan institutions free to continue teaching antidemocratic ideas.

Predicts Fall Of German Regime

JAN MASARYK,
son of the founder of the Czecho-Slovakian Republic, arrived at the Czecho-Slovakian Legation here yesterday after a 12-day journey from England. This Cow Went ToTown—and Back

Washington, Ga., June 24 (AP).—A Wilkes County farmer invited another farmer to accompany him to Augusta, where he was taking a cow to be sold at auction.

While at the auction, Farmer No. 2 bought a cow and arranged with his companion to haul the cow back to Washington.

When they unloaded the cow they discovered it was the same they started out with.

Not only had they driven 120 miles, but also had paid a sales commission on the deal.

Japan Sends Warship to French Indo-China To 'Observe' Suspected Munitions Vessels

By the Associated Press

Tokyo (Tuesday), June 25.—Japanese warships were dispatched to Haiphong, French Indo-China port, today to "observe the movements" of vessels suspected of carrying munitions and supplies to China, the admiralty announced.

The size of the force was not stated.

This action was taken by Japan as informed sources said the Tokyo government may attempt to declare a "protectorate" over French and Netherlands territories in the Orient.

Such a move, it was said, probably would follow discussions with Germany and Italy as to the future of such holdings by defeated European powers.

Responsible Japanese sources expressed concern at the chance the Far Eastern colonies of France and the Netherlands might pass into the hands of the victors in the European war. It was felt that such a situation would be disadvantageous to Japan.

Japan plans to enter into direct relations with the government of French Indo-China and will ignore the French government in Bordeaux and the "pro-British French committee" being organized in London, it was understood at the Tokyo Foreign Office, according to the United Press.)

Authoritative quarters said the French colonial army in Indo-China is composed largely of natives and probably would retreat to the interior if actually attacked.

Such direct action was not thought to be likely, however, in view of the complete agreement to Japanese demands thus far.

By the Associated Press

Further evidence of a Japanese "strong hand" policy toward British-French possessions in the Far East was seen in reported demands for stationing Japanese inspectors in Burma to check the arms traffic and for shutting off Hongkong trade with China.

Immediately the Japanese backed up their demands with armed forces to block arms shipments. They reported uncontested landings by their naval forces at several key positions along the Pearl (Canton) River, west of Hongkong.

The demands, according to a neutral source who said they had been communicated to the British, include:

1. Stationing of Japanese inspectors in Burma to enforce a ban on arms traffic to China.
2. Termination of trade between the British Crown Colony of Hongkong and the Chinese hinterland.
3. Withdrawal of British interests, including military forces, from the Shanghai International Settlement.

Neutral diplomatic circles predicted Britain would reject the demands, but attempt to reach a compromise.

Further Japanese pressure on French Indo-China has been delayed temporarily, reliable sources said, by the Franco-German settlement in Europe and a French agreement to allow Japanese inspectors in Indo-China.

The same sources said part of the French navy, including six destroyers, at least one cruiser and several mine-layers, is en route to Indo-China to bolster defenses there. In both French Indo-China and the Dutch East Indies vigil is maintained against any attempt to seize these territories.

Consulates Bombed

Chungking, June 24 (AP).—The building occupied by the joint American-British Bible Society and the French consulate were demolished in a raid carried out by nearly 100 Japanese bombers attacking in waves.

The British embassy and British consulate were extensively damaged, and seven Chinese employes of the British and French consulates were killed. There were no foreign casualties.

Chungking's poor were the heaviest victims, the bombs blasting apart their make-shift homes and causing numerous fires. Mayor K. C. Wu said casualties, however, numbered less than 50.

Ambulance Driver Describes Slaughter of 30,000 Nazis

(Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.)

New York, June 24.—The slaughter of 30,000 German troops in three days early in May as the Germans marched into the French fortified positions of the Maginot Line, was described today by Kenneth C. Banfield, jr., 26, the first American volunteer ambulance corps driver to return.

Banfield said French machine-gunners told him later that it had sickened them to shoot the Germans down in hopeless droves as they marched up to certain death. The French losses in the engagement were only between 3,000 and 5,000, Banfield said.

Banfield said the German soldiers seemed to "love" the job of driving hopelessly ahead into the French guns. "It is a psychological reaction," he said. "It is fantastic how they do it. It is not a question of courage but of blind obedience." He said the Germans were 100 per cent behind the Nazi regime, and could not have shown a greater enthusiasm.

They came marching over eight deep, he said, and were "slaughtered like rabbits." Those who succeeded in getting past the first French lines where Banfield was posted were "slaughtered back of our lines with no chance of getting out," he said. "There was an absolute disregard of life," he said.

Banfield said he had a series of close escapes from death. One "lovely day" he and a doctor drove up close to the lines to look for wounded from the night's action and had started back as the Germans started artillery fire against Hambach, Lorraine, a town they were just entering. They were racing along at 55 M. P. H. when a shell suddenly struck 50 yards ahead of them. They pitched into the shallow crater a second later.

The success of the German espionage in the Lorraine sector was "incredible," he said. At 2 o'clock one day in April a party planned to go over the German lines 800 yards away at 9 p. m. in search of prisoners.

At 5 p. m., three hours after the plan was formulated, the German radio came on and in its usual chummy way addressed by name the lieutenant who had been named to head the raiding party.

"Don't come through the way you planned, lieutenant," the radio said in effect. "We have guns covering that spot, but you might try it a little to the left. It's so exposed there we can't put up a gun."

Another time when a French colonel was up on inspection, the German radio came on during his meal, and told him he was sitting too close to his neighbor at table. Then it proceeded to name in turn each man at the table, and concluded by expressing the hope the colonel enjoyed the food.

The radio constantly told the French not to fight because the German grievance was against England, Banfield added. Banfield said a partial explanation of the German success at espionage was obtained one day when one of the French runners was caught telephoning to the Germans from an advanced shack.

Arrest of Dog On Sultry Day Halts War Talk

The cop walked slowly across E street yesterday dangling a noosed cord in his left hand. He advanced cautiously along the south side of the street toward Thirteenth street northwest.

The dog hunched against the raised curbing of the triangular park, long tongue lolling in the shade of a swamp maple.

It was just a dog without license, without friend; plain dog panting in the shade at noonday. It did not see the cop.

Beside a bench nearby in the park two men gesticulated. One clenched a morning paper in a fist. Neither saw cop or dog.

"Ja," said the larger man, "Ja. But that iss the peace so that iss the peace. It iss not worse than the last one. . . ."

At a rejoinder from the other, his face flushed, his accent grew thicker. "I'm tellink you . . ."

The cop was walking on tip-toe now. The dog hung its head lower, lean brown flanks heaving.

Across the street a newspaper vendor and a colored auto washer started shouting at each other. The auto washer sat back on a fender and curled his lips back in disdain.

"Listen, boy. Ah don' know who yo' thinks yo' is . . ."

The noose dropped over the dog's neck. Squealing, it fought the rope. Its cries made passersby pause, brought the two men from their argument near the park bench. The paper vendor and the auto washer shuffled across the street.

The cop tied the rope to a parking meter as the dog set up a last howl. The dog lowered its head, and stood motionless.

"Got him," said the cop, taking off his helmet and wiping perspiration from his face.

"Yeah," said the small man. "Yeah. But what for?"

"Gotta keep 'em off the streets in this weather," said the cop as he put in a call for the pound wagon.

The Washington Post will give its readers the most complete possible coverage, in news, pictures, and comment, of the Republican convention in Philadelphia.

Six members of The Post's own staff are in Philadelphia: Robert Albright to do the running news story, John Oakes to handle the platform and resolutions, Edward Folliard to handle delegates and candidates, Hedley Donovan and Christine Sadler to report the human interest and women's angles of this colorful spectacle, Felix Morley to gather first-hand information for editorial comment.

The columnists are there in full force: Dorothy Thompson, Walter Lippmann, Mark Sullivan, Ernest Lindley, Westbrook Pegler, Harlan Miller.

The Associated Press, United Press, International News Service, and New York Tribune Service have reporters and feature writers on the scene, and all of the material they write will come to the wireroom of The Post. Not all of this news service material will be used; much of it is duplication; but having it available gives assurance that nothing will be missed.

Depend on The Washington Post for the story of this convention and you won't be disappointed.

Brides to Have Social Stage to Themselves As Society Moves to Beaches and Mountains To Make News There Until September

WASHINGTON SOCIETY NEWS for the most part will be made elsewhere from now until September, when vacationing residents start flocking back from beach and mountain resorts. Debutantes, who have taken over much of the spotlight for the past few weeks, will bow out of the local picture until next season; and brides, bless 'em, will have the stage to themselves for the remainder of the summer.

From New York comes word that Miss Pauline Curtis, debutante daughter of Mrs. John M. Gross, of Bethlehem, Pa., and Hampshire House, N. Y., will be guest of honor at a dinner to be given on Thursday by her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Bostwick. The party will take place at the Bostwick's country home at Westbury, Long Island, and will precede the dance that Edwin A. Fish will give for his debutante niece, Miss Isabel Paul. The latter is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Paul, of Philadelphia.

Mention of one Fish reminds me of another. Miss Zeva Fish, debutante daughter of Representative and Mrs. Hamilton Fish, left yesterday with Miss Beth Kean, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Robert Winthrop Kean, for Wyoming where they will spend the summer on a ranch. Meanwhile, Miss Fish's parents, and their son, Hamilton 3d, are taking in the big show at Philadelphia.

THERE ARE THOSE who say with a knowing nod that it's too, too bad, but Newport—once the queen of summer resorts—just isn't what it used to be. From what I can hear, however, this season is to recapture the "queen's" lost glory and will be quite a gay one, with the accent distinctly on the younger set. Countess Lazlo Szechenyi and her daughters, the Misses Sylvia and Nadine Szechenyi, are at Newport for the season and have registered for the season at Bailey's Beach.

Arthur Bradley Campbell and his debutante cousins, the Misses Isabelle and Marjorie Meuser, are expected to arrive almost any day now and will take up residence at Chetwode, the magnificent villa that Mr. Campbell has leased from John Jacob Astor. The former hoped to keep the place until October, but Mr. Astor and his wife, the former Tucky French, have decided to spend the season's end there; so Mr. Campbell and the Meusers will have to pack their bags and be out by September 9. Meanwhile, the Astors will be at the Rhinebeck estate which they purchased last year from Mrs. Tracy Dows.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES indicate that the Meusers are going to be feted right and left at Newport; and that to start the ball rolling at a lively clip, Mr. Campbell will entertain at a large dance for them early in July. Among his house guests at Newport during the season will be Princess Laura Rospigliosi and her daughters, the Princesses Francesca and Camilla Rospigliosi, who are now visiting briefly in Westbury, Long Island.

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall M. Langhorne, who left their home here last week have been at the Plaza in New York for several days before going on to the summer home at Bar Harbor, Me. Time was when vacationists there pointed with pride at Wingwood, the Bar Harbor estate occupied each summer by its owner, Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury. Well, this year she won't be there. Instead, she will be at Boxwood Manor, the 300-acre summer home that she has leased from William Buchsbaum, at Spring Lake, N. J. She expects to move there from Philadelphia on July 15.

Mrs. Stotesbury changed her vacation locale in order to be near her son, James H. H. Cromwell, who will be stumping New Jersey as Democratic candidate for the United States Senate. According to present plans, he will spend much time with his mother. Sometime in August, however, he will fly to Honolulu to be with his wife, the former Doris Duke, who is expecting her first child the latter part of that month.

MISS MIRIAM D. SCOTT,
daughter of Mrs. Russell Sard, left with Mr. and Mrs. Sard several days ago for Maine, where they will spend the summer at Bossange Cottage, Somesville, Mount Dessert. The past winter, Miss Scott studied here at the Abbott Art School. She is expected to return to Washington in September

About the Town with DUDLEY HARMON

THE NORWEGIAN MINISTER, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, is among the diplomats planning to look in on the Republican National Convention this week.

The last national convention this envoy attended was 27 years ago in 1912, when the Democrats nominated Woodrow Wilson. The Minister, then a young attache here, took the trolly over to Baltimore and stayed all through the excitement which went on for 46 ballots. Finally, so tense and worn out was he after all this, that he found himself becoming very undiplomatic and taking up the refrain, "Win With Wilson," with the delegates.

The Minister was much cheered recently to receive a letter from his 84-year-old mother in Norway. She also sent him her photograph to assure him that she is well.

MME. HECTOR ALLARD, the French wife of the Canadian Third Secretary here, had 45 male relatives fighting for France. She has not yet learned the fate of any of them . . . We heard the other day that there are 50,0000,000 undelivered letters in the Paris postoffice.

NEWS FROM the residential front: The Frederick Merrills have chartered a boat for the month of July and will sail up the New England coast. They will visit Martha's Vineyard, Nantucket and several other ports of call before ending up in Bar Harbor.

Mrs. Edward Page is off the end of the week for a vacation at Kennebunkport, Me., where the two leading summer citizens are Booth Tarkington and Kenneth Roberts . . . Mrs. Hugh Cumming, jr., hopes to get out to California sometime during the summer to visit an aunt there, but Mr. Cumming, who is head of the Norwegian desk at the State Department, says he is busier than ever and can't get away . . . Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., are planning a trip by motor to Mexico in August—providing that threatened revolution doesn't break out. From New Orleans they will come back by boat.

THE GEORGE HOWES will send their two oldest children to camp and will stay here all summer with the baby. Incidentally, when conversation turned to the cutting off of the water supply in Georgetown last week, Mr. Howe volunteered the most ingenious solution yet—he shaved in his fish pond.

Residents seem about the only ones who are getting away at all for a holiday. Most officials are glued to their desks with no prospect of a vacation at all—unless you count attendance at one of the two conventions as one.

Florida College Girls Present Aquacade For Gamma Phi Beta Convention Delegates

500 Members Here To Attend Sessions At Wardman Park

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

An aquacade, climaxed by the performers jumping through flaming hoops, was presented last night by girls from Alpha Mu Chapter, of Rollins College, Orlando, Fla., as a feature of the entertainment at Gamma Phi Beta Sorority's national convention now in session at the Wardman Park Hotel.

MRS. DEHN

The aquacade was staged at the Wardman pool for the sorority members following a dinner of which the Alpha Mu Chapter also was in charge. The members dressed in jungle costume and presented a jungle dance. Later in the evening, Duchess Carafa D'Andria, of New York City, gave a lecture on beauty at the Wardman Theater.

Nearly 500 members of the sorority are here from all parts of the country attending the convention at which Mrs. William Dehn, of Seattle, the national president, is presiding. Yesterday's business sessions featured a discussion of the camps for underprivileged children which are the organization's main philanthropic project. Mrs. Hubert Hardy, of Evanston, Ill., presided at the round-table.

The camps maintained in Vancouver B. C., Denver and Buffalo, were started in 1926. They are in session from a month to six weeks, taking 32 girls at a time for two-week vacation periods. The children are sent to the camps on the recommendation of public agencies. All of the counselors are Gamma Phi Beta members who volunteer for the work. Three who are now here will go directly from convention to assume their summer duties. They are Miss Eda Nelson and Miss Florence Fellows who go to Buffalo and Miss Jeanne Branham, to Denver.

The aim of the sorority is the addition of $75,000 to its endowment fund by 1949.

The national organization also provides "campships" for girls in various areas in which there are chapters, so they can attend nearby camps when they are too far away to go to one of the sorority's own.

This afternoon, there will be a Panhellenic roundtable led by Mrs. Harold Hartman of Settle. Sorority problems will be discussed.

In the evening, the chapter at William and Mary College will be in charge of an "Old Virginny" dinner at which peanut soup and Virginia ham will be on the menu, and all of the guests will wear cotton dresses. Cotton frocks also were worn yesterday at the "cotton luncheon" planned by the Birmingham chapter. a banquet tomorrow night will climax the convention and will include entertainment by three of the organization's best known members. They will be Alice Ringling Coerper, of Milwaukee, monologist; Jean Dickenson, of opera and radio fame, and Grace Weymer, head of the harp department at Syracuse University.

Another prominent member here for the convention is Mrs. Robert Fitzgerald, past president of the Women's Auxiliary to the American Medical Association and chairman of expansion for the sorority. Her home is in Wauwautusa, Wis. Mrs. Beatrice Pierce Smith author of "It's Fun to Know the Rules" and "Etiquette for Young Children," also is here for the conclave and is one of Gama Phi Beta's distinguished members.

Officers, in addition to Mrs. Dehn, are: Mrs. G. M. Finonson, of Piedmont, Calif., vice president and alumnae secretary whose daughter is also a member and at the convention; Alice Cammerer, of Detroit, treasurer; Mrs. Lester A. White, of Chicago, executive secretary in charge of the central office there; Mrs. Fitzgerald, expansion chairman; Mrs. Joseph Weiner, of Los Angeles, inspection chairman; Mrs. Harold Hartman, of Seattle, national Panhellenic delegate; Mrs. George Keith, of Mount Alto, Calif., finance chairman, and Mrs. Ray Pinkerton, of Ventura, Calif., editor of The Crescent.

The sorority was established at Syracuse University in 1874. It will install the new chapter at the University of Maryland at this convention as the fiftieth in its membership.

Underwood & Underwood

Mrs. Henry H. Flather Opens Tulip Hill Estate for Finnish Orphan Benefit; Panhellenic Unit Elects Mrs. Kavanagh

WORLD EVENTS are moving so fast and one relief demand follows another in such quick succession that we are likely to forget needs have by no means been met in countries temporarily replaced by others in the spotlight of the war emergency. Finland is solemnly rebuilding after her valliant defense of her liberty last winter and American friends are still helping.

Tuesday, July 2, Mrs. Henry H. Flather, who is widely known for her activities in the Girl Scout movement and for her philanthropies, will open her estate, Tulip Hill, for a garden party for the benefit of the fund for Finnish orphans.

The house, on Muddy Creek road 9 miles from Annapolis, was built by Samuel Galloway nearly 200 years ago. It was then situated in the center of a 2,000-acre tobacco plantation, and gained its name from trees rather than flowers. Two great tulip trees still stand in front of the house. Years ago, when sailing vessels came up West River, there were four of them, and they were among the first landmarks sighted by the sailors.

The house has been restored by the Flathers, who have had it 22 years. Terraced gardens with fine box, roses and old spreading trees command a view of the river beyond a broad expanse of meadow.

Inside, handsome furnishings of the colonial period lend the house the gracious atmosphere it must have had in old plantation days. There are cushioned window seats, quaint whatnots, four-poster beds, old chests, handsomely carved tables and chairs and beautiful old English china.

Mrs. Flather always opens Tulip Hill for the Maryland garden tours and occasionally for benefits such as this, planned to aid Finnish relief.

EDISONS TO BE HONORED—Tomorrow afternoon, at 5 o'clock, the Newspaper Women's Club is entertaining at a tea in honor of the retiring Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Edison, at the Raleigh Hotel.

PANHELLENIC ELECTS—Mrs. Preston Kavanagh, of Kappa Alpha Theta, has been elected president of the City Panhellenic Association, succeeding Miss Edythe Thomson, of Phi Omega Pi, who has served for the past year.

Other new officers are: Mrs. Floyd Rothballer, Kappa Kappa Gamma, vice president; Mrs. Richard Tatlow, Delta Gamma, corresponding secretary; Mrs. M. L. Gillillan, Alpha Phi, recording secretary; Mrs. James A. Rolls, Gamma Phi Beta, treasurer.

The association expects to continue the quarterly social planning meetings which were inaugurated this year and include the city, college and professional women's Greek letter societies. The usual annual luncheon will be held, the proceeds of which will be given to a charity. This year the association voted $20 to the Red Cross.

The organization plans next year to set up a speakers' bureau in which prominent Panhellenic members will be listed who will be available for talks before any of the Panhellenic groups in the city. This is expected to foster fraternity feeling in Washington.

Committees named for next year include Mrs. George C. Ober, jr., Pi Beta Phi, chairman of the speakers' bureau; Mrs. Vaughn Huse, Alpha Gamma Delta, and Mrs. Rothballer, members; Mrs. Edgar Withrow, Zeta Tau Alpha, scholarship chairman, and Miss Thomson, publicity chairman.

A dinner meeting, set tentatively for September 25 at the A. A. U. W. clubhouse, will open the season. All delegates and presidents of the sororities will be invited to attend.

Arts Thriving At Y. W. C. A.

The arts are thriving in the workshops at the Y. W. C. A. this summer. Workshops are to be held Mondays and Thursdays from 7:30 to 9:30.

Last night the first of the music workshops was conducted by Miss Mary Burnett, music secretary for the "Y. W.," and included both listening and singing. Beethoven's Fifth Symphony and Brahms' Hungarian dances were played and songs by both composers were sung. Miss Josephine Hamilton will have charge of the program Thursday in which the "Peer Gynt Suite" of Grieg, and Tschaikowsky's "Nuteracker Suite" will be played. She will sing the songs of the two composers.

In the Radio Guild Workshop, under the direction of Miss Marie Morrisey, the group members are writing short scripts designed for radio. These scripts will be discussed by the group as to good and bad points and there will also be discussions of techniques of production and dramatization. Visits will also be made to local radio stations.

The craft workshop, under the direction of Miss Louise Danforth and Miss Charline Miller, is offering work with wooden belts, plates, bookends, buttons, cork mats, ribbon and raffia belts. Stand-patter dolls of wire and lead are being made from time to time.

Women's Clubs Back Defense Program at Closing Session

District Federation Offers Assistance To U. S. Government, Urges Congress To Pursue Nonpartisan Policy

The District Federation of Women's Clubs yesterday closed its season with a meeting at Hotel 2400, at which it affirmed its belief in and loyalty to the Government of the United States, offered its assistance in "all practical and necessary work" toward national defense and called on its members to "use without ceasing, the power of prayer."

The resolution affirming the organization's loyalty was presented by the resolutions committee, of which Mrs. Virginia White Speel is chairman, and included a recommendation that "all possible effort be made toward controlling fifth column workers and suppressing subversive propaganda, especially in schools, colleges and clubs."

Mrs. Ernest William Howard, chairman of legislation, presented resolutions embodying nine recommendations, one of which indorsed "compulsory military and vocational training for young men and women."

The federation also recommended that Congress follow a non-partisan policy regarding matters relating to national defense; urged that the Allies be given "all the aid it is possible to give without impairing our own national defense and short of sending an expeditionary force;" that Congress cut red tape in acquiring weapons of defense needed by the Nation's armed forces and specify in making appropriations, numbers and amounts of such weapons needed.

It also indorsed the President's plan for a cartel to control exports of staple products of the 21 nations of the Americas, designed to protect our economy and that of other American nations from the repercussions of the disturbed international situation; urged that Congress restore to the Federal Bureau of Investigation the right to employ wire-tapping in its detection of espionage and sabotage; indorsed compulsory fingerprinting of aliens; urged that only American-born or naturalized citizens be allowed to hold or retain positions in civil service, or not in civil service, in the Federal or District Governments, and expressed opposition to the adjournment of Congress sine die, recommending short recesses instead, during this time of emergency.

Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the club, who presided, appointed an emergency committee, headed by Mrs. John L. Luker, with Mrs. LeVerne Beales as vice chairman, to coordinate all relief or other emergency work undertaken by the clubs within the federation. Report of the summer activities will be made at the October meeting.

On a motion introduced by Mrs. Lloyd A. Biddle, past president of the federation, it was voted to recommend to the corporation counsel and the District Commissioners that the Code of the District of Columbia relating to immorality to revised to prohibit all acts of pandering, solicitation or prostitution, direct or indirect.

Luncheon was served following the morning business session. Miss Sibyl Baker spoke at the afternoon meeting, describing the work of the new committee on recreational facilities for girls.

CAA and FSA Chiefs Submit Resignations

Hester to Practice Law; Alexander to Devote Full Time to Fund

By Edward Ryan

THE CHIEFS of two major Government agencies resigned yesterday.

Clinton M. Hester, Cviil Aeronautics Administrator and co-author of the act which set up the agency two years ago, told President Roosevelt he wanted to leave the Government service to practice law in Washington. His successor is expected to be Col. Donald H. Connolly, Army engineer and Veteran's Administration "trouble shooter."

Dr. Will W. Alexander, chief of the Farm Security Administration and a close adviser to the President on farm problems, submitted his resignation to Secretary Wallace. C. B. Baldwin, Assistant Farm Security Administrator, will move up to Alexander's job when the latter leaves for full-time duty as vice president of the Rosenwald Fund in Chicago.

Both resignations are effective July 1.

Hester's resignation, timed for the day when the CAA moves under the Commerce Department by terms of the President's fourth reorganization order, ends a 21-year record as an ace "career" man. A native of Iowa, he came out of World War service with the 301st Engineers to enter Government service as a law clerk in the Emergency Fleet Corporation, rose in 19 years to the $12,000 CAA post.

HE DID LEGAL work for the Interior Department, Shipping Board and Justice Department, where he served as chief attorney. With the New Deal, he went to the Treasury Department as assistant general counsel. In this post, for almost a year, he worked with members of Congress and representatives of the airplane industry in drafting the Civil Aeronautics Act.

Besides launching operation of the new act, Hester took time during his months as administrator to fly every American airline. This ambition, he says, was started with the idea that CAA operations would be improved by knowing the operating problems of the airlines.

He flew to Europe with the first Atlantic Clipper, to New Zealand with the first California Clipper, and around South America. Last week he started on a last lap, a flight to Alaska and back. He was expected here late last night.

Part of the reason for his resignation, it was reported, came from his opposition to the idea of placing the CAA under the Commerce Department. Hester, in his letter to the President, said he was "grateful" for the opportunity to serve as CAA chief, and added:

"I trust that you will feel free to call upon me if, at any time in the future, I can be of service to you."

THE PRESIDENT replied that he was "disappointed" to learn that Hester intended to enter private law practice. He praised Hester's "splendid career in Government service," and said:

To you must go much of the credit for having made the Authority the splendid agency it has become. You as administrator, and the members of the five-man board, have in a brief space of time brought civil aviation in this country to its highest peak."

Way was cleared last week for Col. Connolly to succeed Hester, with introduction by Senate Majority Leader Barkley of a joint resolution to authorize the army officer to serve in the civil post. Col. Connolly was the first of the army officers sent to replace civilian directors of Civil Works Projects following the graft investigations of 1934. He was in charge of the Los Angeles office, later of the southern California District, and continued with the WPA until last year. Recently he has been on Army duty at Fort Logan, Colo.

ALEXANDER, KNOWN to hundreds of employes in his own organization and the department as "Dr. Will," entered Government service in 1935 as assistant administrator of the Resettlement Administration. He was a member of the President's Committee on Farm Tenancy in 1936 and helped draft recommendations which produced the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act. He succeeded Rexford Guy Tugwell as head of Resettlement and continued in charge when Farm Security took over the resettlement program.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES
This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief
Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.
The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.
When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills Adv.

D. C. Boys Explore Deep Cave, Find Initials Dated 1795

YOUNG EXPLORERS—Howard Acton, Dick King and Stanley Boyd (left to right), who discovered a deep cave near Harpers Ferry, W. Va. With rope, flashlights, candles and hand picks, they made their way along a half-mile passage leading to a large cave, where they discovered the date 1795 cut into a wall

Three unemployed Washington boys came out of West Virginia yesterday with the idea of climbing high financially by going deep underground to explore and exploit caves.

Stanley Boyd, 19, of 3060 Fox Hall road northwest; Dick King, 20, Harvard Hall Apartments, and Howard Acton, 19, of 5532 Klingle street northwest, are the explorers who discovered a deep cave near Harpers Ferry, W. Va., with the date 1795 cut into a wall. Boyd and King were graduated from Western High School this year, while Howard was graduated from Hebron Academy in Maine.

They found the cave Sunday on a farm about 5 miles northwest of Harpers Ferry. With rope, flashlights, candles and hand picks they made their way through a half-mile passageway until they came to a large room columned with stalactites and stalagmites.

They saw initials carved on the walls, the latest dated 1840 and the earliest 1795, the boys said. In the cave were fresh tracksof what appeared to be a wildcat, "all pointing into the cave and none coming out," according to Howard.

"Maybe this isn't a cave that can be worked commercially,' Boyd said. "But we're going to keep on looking for one until we find it. We think it's the best way to spend our spare time while we're looking for work."

"And even when we get jobs, we'll look on them as a means of financing exploring until we strike the cave we're looking for," added King.

D. C. Red Cross Passes Goal Of $300,000

Raising of New Doubled Quota Sets National Record

The District of Columbia Chapter of the Red Cross yesterday passed its $300,000 minimum War Relief Fund goal—and became the first chapter in a city of more than 500,000 population to reach the new doubled quota set by national headquarters.

Contributions of $14,682.12 brought the District total to $302,405.50. But Bruce Baird, general chairman of the campaign, urged that "every available dollar will be welcome" as needs in the stricken European coutries "are growing daily."

Plans are going forward for the Red Cross Golf Tournament at the Indian Spring Country Club July 4; for the baseball game between the sandlotters at Griffith Stadium June 29, and for the benefit rally of Jewish Women's organizations at the Woodmont Country Club July 15. The Metropolitan Police Department and a number of other organizations are still to report, Baird pointed out.

In thanking thousands of volunteer workers in the District for their efforts, Baird urged that "any worker with unfinished business should clean it up before stopping."

Meanwhile, the national Red Cross war relief fund reached a total of $14,843,967 yesterday.

Count Robert van der Straten-Ponthoz, Ambassador of Belgium to the United States, sent a personal contribution of $500.

Inmates and employes of the State Prison of Southern Michigan, located at Jackson, gave $1,125. Flowers from the prison gardens were sold by Red Cross volunteers for additional funds.

A $25,000 contribution from the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and its subsidiaries was received by Norman H. Davis, chairman of the Red Cross, from E. G. Grace, president of the organization.

Contributions Listed

The following were reported among District contributions yesterday:

In the Government unit the Interior Department sent in $212; Civil Service Commission, $1,113.42; Washington Navy Yard, $5,017.70; Walter Reed Hospital, $26; Industrial Home School, $11.50; Navy Department, $164.75; Federal Trade Commission, $10; Social Security Board, $953.08; Works Project Administration, $871.38; Department of Agriculture, $1,024.14; State Department, $264; D. Booths in the stores and banks yesterday reported a total of $840.45 and from the school children of the District came another $291.69 for the National Children's Fund.

Drive for Camp Funds Lags

While hundreds of needy children wait to see whether they will have a chance to go to summer camps, the lagging campaign for funds for that purpose will be spurred by a committee meeting this afternoon in the office of Juvenile Court Judge Fay L. Bentley.

With a goal of $7,500, only about $3,000 has been raised, Mrs. Frank Linzel, chairman of the needy children's camps committee, said yesterday.

The fund would make possible three-week camping periods in the Chopawamsic area, instead of three two week periods, she said. It would also provide for scores of children who would not otherwise be able to go to camp at all.

Exodus Begins This Week

Contributions should be sent to the committee treasurer, Claude W. Kniseley at the Riggs National Bank, Seventh and I streets northwest.

Meanwhile, the annual exodus of Washington children to the country begins this week, with the opening of many of the camps operated by Community Chest agencies, in the Chopawamsic area and elsewhere.

Nearly 6,000 youngsters, the Community Chest announced yesterday, are expected to find outdoor recreation and health in the 16 agency-sponsored camps.

More than 60 girls, armed with tennis rackets, blankets and other impedimenta, boarded two buses for Kamp Kahlert, Y. W. C. A. resort on the West River, near Sudley, Mr., and two weeks of canoeing, swimming, hiking and bther activities.

Also opening yesterday were the Y. M. C. A.'s Camp Letts, on the Rhode River, near Chesapeake Bay, Md.; the Holiday House Girls' Friendly Society's camp on Mount Vernon boulevard near Alexandria; the Jewish Community Center's season at Camp Louise and Camp Airy, Md., and the Twelfth street branch Y. M. C. A.'s Camp Lichtman (colored), at Chopowamsic, Va.

The Boy Scouts' Camp Theodore Roosevelt, at Willows, Md., opened Sunday; the Scout Camp Woodrow Wilson, Burnt Mills, Md., opened Friday; the Family Service Association's Camp Good Will, Chopowamsic, opens next Friday, and the association's Camp Pleasant (colored), at Chopowamsic, opens Thursday.

Other Community Chest camps begin their sessions in July.

Copyright by New York Times

Simla, British India, June 24.—The operation of German or Italian vessels against British ships has extended to the zone covered by the Royal Indian Navy, it became known today when it was officialy announced that the 661-ton escort vessel Pathan had been sunk while on patrol.

It was not stated whether the Pathan, which carried one 4-inch and two 3-inch guns, was sunk by mine or torpedo.

Since mines have appeared in the Tasman Sea and also off the coast of South Africa the British authorities are inclined to suspect that an Italian merchantman has been "laying eggs" while en route to a neutral port.

CERTAIN OIL COMPANIES are doing everything but claim outright that their regular-priced gasoline will perform as well as our premium-priced gas, Gulf No-Nox.

That isn't even within shouting distance of the facts.

There are three methods most generally used to determine the anti-knock value of a gasoline. These tests are used by us, used by our competitors, and are recognized by everybody in the industry.

On these tests of quality, made by an independent laboratory, the regular gasoline, which is making the most to-do about being the equal of Gulf No-Nox, RATED 7 FULL POINTS BELOW GULF NO-NOX!

Even 3 points in anti-knock rating is a noticeable difference—7 points is a BIG difference . . . gives No-Nox a tremendous advantage in the high-compression engines used in the newer cars . . . makes No-Nox well worth the two-cent premium it costs.

You have lived long enough to know that in everything sold in this world you get about what you pay for. Gasoline is no exception. So, take it with several grains of salt when anybody tells you his regular fuel is as good as Gulf No-Nox.

No-Nox isn't just something that sounds good in print. It makes a real difference in your car. Try a tankful the next time you need gas and find out—to your own satisfaction—whether any regular gas, anywhere, can even be compared with No-Nox!

William Elliott, Washington pilot, walked away from his second crackup yesterday when his plane fell into a clump of trees opposite the Hybla Valley (Va.) Airport. His only injury was a cut on his forehead.

ELLIOTT

Attendants at the field said Elliott, who lives at 620 I street northwest, failed to clear high tension wires at one end of the runway while attempting a landing. The plane, they said, veered from its course, snapped off the top of a pole and plunged into the woods.

Elliott received treatment at the Alexandria Hospital and returned to his demolished craft.

Slayer Surrenders In Shooting of Kinsman

"I just shot a man," calmly stated Jesse Jackson, 34, colored, of 507 L street northwest, yesterday to Policeman W. E. Klein, of the Traffic Division, who was just leaving the District Court Building.

Jackson was taken to the First Precinct station, where he was charged with the murder of his brother-in-law, John Weaver, colored, 29, of 1218 Eighth street northwest.

Police said the shooting took place in the O Street Market at Seventh and O streets northwest, where the victim had been working. Weaver was shot in the side with a shotgun and was taken to Freedmen's Hospital, where he died a few hours later.

Jackson is said to have told police that Weaver had threatened him with a meat ax. He fled the scene and had decided to surrender when he met Policeman Klein.

Pedestrian Reflectors Called Accident Curb

Persons who wear dark clothes at night "are as much to blame for accidents as motorists," Dr. Edwin H. Silver, of Washington, told the American Optometric Association in convention yesterday at Cincinnati. He urged legislation to require pedestrians to wear reflectors at night.

DR. SILVER

"The chest," he said, "is the proper place for such a reflector, because the proper way to walk at night is facing traffic." His recommendations were part of his report for the association's Motor Vision Commission, of which he has been chairman 12 years.

School Janitor Kills Self in Classroom

A certificate of suicide was issued by the coroner's office late yesterday in the death of Charles T. Brown, 36-year-old janitor of Stuart Junior High School, who was found dead on the floor of the school's home economics room with gas jets wide open on all eight stoves in the room.

Near the body police found a note dated Saturday which gave the victim's address as 705 Fourth street northwest and read: "I'm sorry for everything. I'm afraid I'm going crazy soon."

Brown, a bachelor, had been employed at the school about three years. The body was discovered by Horace B. Sheahan, an assistant custodian of the building.

Dr. Gage told of the part this college at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, will play in national defense. He discussed the development of the college, and complimented the alumni on their support. Motion pictures were shown.

Amendments to the House bill allowing District police and firemen to retire at half pay after 25 years' service will be offered by Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, in reporting the measure to the Senate District Committee next week, he said yesterday.

Senator Overton proposes changes that would require every applicant for retirement to be 55 years of age or older and would limit $30 000 a year for the total pension appropriation.

Pastors Seek Police Chief's Reinstatement

Claim Politicians Used Jehovah's Witnesses Case as Ouster Excuse

Charging that the Montgomery County, Md., Commissioners have seized upon the attack upon the Jehovah's Witnesses in Rockville Wednesday night as "a subterfuge" to dismiss Chief of Police Charles M. Orme, a group of county pastors will attend the session of the commissioners today to demand his reinstatement.

The Rev. W. B. Waters, pastor of the Faith Chapel Methodist Church at Derwood, is spokesman for the group. He said yesterday that his group believes that county politicians are seeking dismissal of Chief Orme because he has "refused to be dominated by politicians in the enforcement of the law."

The Rev. Mr. Waters said that a group of citizens is circulating petitions through the county seeking Orme's reinstatement. The minister pointed out that the chief was at his home in Gaithersburg when the riot took place and "there is no real basis for the suspension of the police chief or to hold him responsible for what happened."

Supported Him Before

The ministers, who are collaborating with the Rev. Mr. Waters in defending Orme, first came to public attention in his support several weeks ago when he was criticised by a county newspaper for raiding beer establishments because they sold beer across the bar on Sunday, instead of making the patrons remain seated at a table. The beer dealers arrested were acquitted by the three trial magistrates of the county.

The ministers are the Rev. William R. Elliott of Grace Methodist Church, Gaithersburg; the Rev. Claude A. Brubaker, Mount Zion Baptist Church, Alta Vista; the Rev. Margaret Sowers of the Church of God, Montrose, Md.; the Rev. G. D. Kundahl, of the Neelsville Presbyterian Church, and the Rev. Fred A. Van Sickle of the Free Methodist Church, Rockville.

The Rev. Mr. Waters said his group was not condoning the attack upon the Jehovah's Witnesses by their stand. "That really was an unlawful act and should be punished," he said.

Trial of Ten Postponed

Trial of ten defendants charged with disorderly conduct and unlawful assembly scheduled for hearing in Rockville Police Court today has been postponed until Thursday night. It was announced that defense counsel would ask jury trials for the men. This will serve to postpone the trial until November, it is expected.

State's Attorney Ben G. Wilkinson said the State would ask for jury trial if the defense fails to do so "because this is an important matter which should have the careful scrutiny of 12 good men in the jury box."

Shooting of 10-Year-Old Boy By Capitol Policeman Probed

Pistol Discharges by Accident As Sergeant Places It in Holster, Says Report; Bullet Lodges in Neck

Capitol officials last night were investigating the shooting of a 10-year-old colored boy by a Capitol policeman in the guardroom of the Senate Office Building yesterday afternoon.

The youngster, Fred Walker, jr., of 912 Fifth street northwest, was said to be in good condition at Casualty Hospital last night, with a bullet lodged in his neck.

According to the official report received by the First Precinct police station, the boy was wounded when a .38 caliber pistol was discharged as Sergt. Vernon E. Deus, 35, of 1222 Shepherd street northwest, was placing it in his holster after cleaning it. The report was signed by Lieut. Roy L. Johnson of the Capitol Police.

The sergeants-at-arms of the House and Senate were investigating assertions by the wounded boy and three companions who witnessed the shooting that the police sergeant had pointed the pistol at the youngster just before the gun went off.

Taken to Guardroom

The three children, who with Fred, had been taken to the guardroom after two of them had been swimming in the Plaza Pool between the Capitol and the Union Station, were Elijah Marie, 12; his brother, John, 9, and sister, Margie, 11, colored, of 440 I street northwest.

The shooting occurred at 1:30 p. m., and according to the official report, two policemen were in the guardroom at the time, as well as the four children.

The injured boy's mother, Ella Walker, told a Post reporter that Sergt. Deus and two other policemen came to her home and informed her of the shooting at 3:30 p. m. The police told her, she said, that the boy had been hurt while helping Sergt. Deus clean his gun. On the way to the hospital, the sergeant told her that he alone had been cleaning the pistol when it went off, she said.

Sergt. Deus, reached at his home, would not comment. Capitol police officers insisted they knew of no accusations by the children, but later The Post learned Capitol police were taking sworn testimony from the Marie children.

"Obviously Accidental"

Kenneth Romney, sergeant at arms of the House, and Chesley W. Jurney, Senate sergeant at arms, revealed that they had ordered investigations and said they would receive a report this morning from Capt. William S. Orthman.

Romney quoted Capt. Orthman as expressing the belief that the shooting was "obviously accidental." Both he and Jurney said they would inquire to see if negligence was involved.

According to the three Marie children, only Elija Marie and Fred Walker were splashing in the pool when taken into custody by the Capitol policeman. Sergeant-at-Arms Jurney said that Sergt. Deus had taken the children to the guardroom to be held until the parents were notified, so that the parents themselves could discipline the children for swimming in the Plaza pool in violation of regulations.

Trio Charged With Series Of Crimes in Two Precincts

Police last night announced the arrest of three youths who confessed, according to police, to a series of crimes in the Second and Fifth precincts.

The arrests, police said, followed a gun-chase in which the three escaped from pursuing patrolmen.

Held are Albert T. Estes, 20, of 1616 Nineteenth street northwest, charged with grand and petit larceny, housebreaking and unauthorized use of an auto; William A. Chase, 19, of 1726 Vermont avenue northwest, charged with grand larceny and unauthorized use of auto; Nathaniel Rochelle, 18, of 1337 Q street northwest, charged with petit larceny, housebreaking and unauthorized use of auto.

According to police, the three on June 13 sped by Private G. L. Gallagher, stationed at a school crossing, Twenty-second and M streets northwest. The policeman ordered the car to stop, and as he approached, the auto dashed off. Private Gallagher, recognizing the auto tags as stolen, commandeered a passing auto, chased the fugitives, and fired two shots in the air.

Unable to catch the trio, the policeman informed headquarters, and on being notified of the chase by police radio Cruiser Car Patrolmen C. W. Kelley and G. I. Cully caught up with the car on Sixteenth street, forcing it into an alley near Riggs street. The three men, however, climbed a fence and escaped. They were arrested in the subsequent investigation.

The stolen car, belonging to Ira K. Jones, of Damascus, Md., had been reported taken from Sixteenth street and Crescent place northwest. Three other sets of stolen tags were found in the car, police said.

Some 'Irregular' Divorces Must Be Recognized, Court Holds

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday declared that under some circumstances public policy requires the District Courts to recognize "irregular" divorces obtained elsewhere.

"It can no longer be said that public policy requires non-recognition of all irregular foreign divorces," said the opinion read by Justice Fred Vinson. "We have recognized that the interest of the State in many situations may lie with recognition of such divorces and preservation of remarriages rather than a dubious attempt to resurrect the original marriage."

Justice Vinson and his colleagues, Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner and Justin Miller, added, however, that "doubtless there are circumstances wherein a particular public policy requires annulment of a marriage without regard to the guilt or innocence of the parties." He indicated cases in which courts had been deceived and in which the marriages dissolved were of persons more closely related than the law allowed.

The court stated its views in refusing to annul the marriage of Dr. William Andrew Goodloe, colored physician, to Mrs. Ambia Irene Ward Goodloe, former Congressional Library employe. Mrs. Goodloe married C. M. Hawk in 1918 and accused him of deserting her in 1923. Later she moved to Alexandria, Va., where she was granted a divorce September 18, 1926. She then moved back to Washington and was married to Dr. Goodloe June 4, 1927.

After some years, Dr. Goodloe sued for an annulment on the ground that his wife's Virginia divorce was invalid. Meanwhile, Hawk had remarried and had several children.

The justices indicated that they regarded the Virginia divorce as valid, but added that, even if it were questionable, they regarded the case as one of those where the courts ought not to go into the question of invalidity.

Former Municipal Court Judge James A. Cobb appeared for Mrs. Goodloe, who resisted the annulment.

Public summer schools will open next Monday in 16 locations for white pupils and in 12 for colored.

The session will run five days a week, through August 9. Three days after its start, there will be holidays on July 4 and 5, but pupils must make up for them by attending school on two Saturdays, July 13 and 20.

Laborer Is Held For Grand Jury In Hit-Run Case

Twenty witnesses at a three-hour inquest yesterday described details of a wild three-mile midtown ride Saturday by Richard S. Nestlerode, 26-year-old laborer. A coroner's jury ordered him held for grand jury action in the death of a 59-year-old pedestrian.

Witnesses charged he struck Joseph Nappo, of 1250 Tenth street northwest, at Ninth and M streets, who later died; struck and injured another pedestrian, and rammed six automobiles, before crashing into a trolley car at Connecticut avenue and Q street northwest.

Policeman Gordon Rowland, who arrested Nestlerode shortly after the collision with the trolley car, testified that Nestlerode had been drinking and acted like a "wild man." Nestlerode said he couldn't remember what happened during the ride.

Varied Pleas Win Leniency For 59 Drivers

Seven Tickets Are Canceled; 52 Get Off With Warnings

Four persons pleaded diplomatic immunity, one person said he had a heart attack and couldn't move his car, while a woman pleaded that she was helping a crippled woman to her apartment, according to the reasons given for 59 traffic ticket adjustments last week.

The list made public through Maj. Brown's office yesterday revealed the "fixing business" was the lowest in several weeks as seven tickets were canceled outright and 52 persons were dismissed with warnings.

Charged with parking during restricted hours, Ruppert Jones, of 3033 Fourteenth street northwest, was let off with a warning when he pleaded that he had suffered the heart attack.

The woman who was excused because she was performing a good deed was Genevieve L. Ruth, of 1025 Connecticut avenue northwest, who said she parked in a restricted zone only momentarily.

Alvena B. Hawkins, 4924 Benning road northeast, was let off on a charge of violating the pedestrian control act when she pleaded financial embarrassment.

Sympathy was extended to Raymond S. Holt, 759 Princeton place northwest, for failure to park close to the curb because, he explained, his battery went dead while he was attempting to park.

Those who escaped through diplomatic immunity were Mario Conti, Italian Embassy; Philip Mudd, an employe of the Soviet Embassy; Henry Lazard, Argentine Embassy, and Col. Eduardo Leonganus, Colombian Embassy.

D.C. Court Upholds U.S. Refusal to Pay On Paris Building

Justice Jennings Bailey, of the District Court, yesterday dismissed a suit of American Legion Building, Paris, Inc., to make the Government pay $61,000 alleged to be owed for Pershing Hall, former building in the French capital, now owned by the United States.

Pershing Hall, a five-story structure, was dedicated in October, 1929. It was taken over by the United State by an act of June 28, 1938, which provided that any construction costs still owed should be paid out of a $432,000 fund received by the Treasury out of the profits of the Stars and Stripes, newspaper of The American Expeditionary Force.

Baltimore Police Arrest Man Indicted for Forgery Here

Righteous indignation yesterday landed Earl Perkins, 32, of Rockville, Tenn., in jail at Baltimore for action of District police and post-office inspectors on a formidable collection of charges.

Perkins came to the attention of Baltimore police when he reported he had been beaten up and robbed in his hotel room by a stranger he met in the cocktail bar. He told them he was W. A. Bassett, of Washington, and rode through Baltimore in a scout car, protesting the while the dire consequences of their failure to apprehend his assailant.

So vehement were his protestations, that detectives held him in sympathetic conversation at headquarters, while others searched his luggage. What they found impelled them to ask if Earl Perkins or W. A. Bassett was wanted here. Perkins was wanted, very much.

He had been indicted for forgery after numerous complaints from citizens whose bank statements had been stolen from their mail boxes. These same citizens later found checks bearing their signatures, made out to Earl Perkins, of whom they never had heard. In all, some $2,500 was reported lost in this way by 15 District residents in three weeks.

One of the victims was W. A. Bassett, of 1739 I street northwest, an SEC attorney.

D'Alesandro Requests Data On District Traffic Survey

Maryland Representative Renews Attempt to Effect Thorough Investigation by Five-Man Committee

District officials were requested to furnish specific data on the character and extent of a traffic survey now under way in Washington as Representative D'Alesandro (Democrat), of Maryland, renewed his efforts to bring about a thorough investigation of Capital traffic.

D'Alesandro, whose resolution asking for an inquiry by a special five-man committee is still pending before the House Rules Committee, called upon Engineer Commissioner David McCoach, jr., for a report on the survey and on M. O. Eldridge, assistant traffic director, for information as to the successful bidders on furnishing traffic lights during the last several years.

The whole matter may be brought to the attention of Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee, when he returns to Washington next week, D'Alesandro indicated.

D'Alesandro said that he did not consider that the investigation he has proposed would duplicate the traffic count now being made by the Highway Department, in cooperation with the Bureau of Public Roads.

"I am interested more in the cause of traffic accidents," he said. "I also want to find out whether there are enough or too many traffic lights in the city. This survey now being made doesn't deal with those problems."

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, recently wrote a letter to Chairman Randolph expressing the opinion that the congressional inquiry would not be advisable because of the survey his department is now conducting.

Police said driver of the car was Nicholas Barilito, 26, of 3527 Tenth street northwest.

Six-year-old Lorraine Butler, colored, of 1110½ U street northwest, was struck by a car in front of 1918 Twelfth street northwest. She was treated for a fractured left leg at Children's Hospital. Roland C. McConnell, colored, 29, of Elizabeth City, N. C., was driver of the car, according to police.

Ralph Perry, 5, of 1911 Naylor road southeast, sustained abrasions of the legs when he was struck in Pennsylvania avenue southeast, near the bridge, by an automobile which police said was operated by James Price, 28, of 2408 Nichols avenue southeast. He was treated at Providence Hospital.

Elizabeth Craig, 10 of 1627 Minnesota avenue southeast, suffered leg and arm injuries when thrown from her bicycle at Seventeenth street and Minnesota avenue by an automobile. Police said the vehicle was operated by Raymond Dillon, 19, of 231 Fourteenth street northeast.

Also injured in a bicycle accident was Edward Bradley, 16, of 3718 Oliver street northwest. He received severe lacerations of the limbs, head and body when his bicycle crashed into the sidewalk on Chain Bridge.

Young Hurler Beats Champs to Increase Lead to Two Games; Throttles Bombers

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, June 24.—Bob Feller posted his eleventh victory of the season here tonight as the Cleveland Indians walloped the New York Yankees, 7 to 1, to increase their first place margin over Detroit to two games. Feller gave up seven hits and fanned five.

Marius Russo started for the world champions, but gave way to Bump Hadley after a three-run Cleveland rally in the second. Atlee Donald finished the game for the New Yorkers.

The game, watched by a crowd of 36,837, was delayed 35 minutes by rain.

The Yankees scored their only run in the fifth on Hadley's double and a single by Frankie Crosetti.

Hal Trosky started the Indians' second-inning rally with a double and Beau Bell, Ben Chapman and Ray Mack followed with singles to plate two runs. Chapman scored on Feller's long fly.

Feller's single to right drove in Chapman, who had singled in the fourth and the Indians added two more in the sixth on two walks, Babe Dalgren's error and a double by Lou Boudreau.

Cleveland collected 11 hits, with every man in the lineup getting at least one safe blow except Ken Keltner.

Feller has lost four games. The defeat gives Russo a record of three and three.

Nats Rained Out, Meet White Sox There Tonight

Hudson, Who Hurled One-Hitter in Last Outing, Will Pitch

By Shirley Povich.

Post Staff Writer

Chicago, June 24.—The Nats will take another fling at American League night life tomorrow evening and the flinger will be Sidney Hudson, whose last outing under the lights put a stop to a seven-game bender of defeats for the Washington club.

Young Hudson will take the mound against the White Sox. Hudson is the natural pitching choice of Manager Bucky Harris. He will be working in turn and his last job was a powerful recommendation. It was a one-hit, 1-0 shutout performance against the Browns in which he had a no-hit game going into the ninth inning, remember?

And slightly downcast at this time is big Joe Krakauskas, who today was supposed to return to a starting role on the Washington staff. But today, one of Chicago's finest wind and rainstorms washed out the scheduled proceedings at Comiskey Field, and Krakky missed his chance. It's indefinite when he'll get another pitching job, as today had presented something of an emergency in which Krakky was to be used as a stop-gap.

The Nats were the beneficiaries of some sort of a break here. They won't be asked to face Ted Lyons. The old Chicago knuckle-baller pitched one inning yesterday before rain washed out the game with the Athletics, and he will not be available for the rest of the series. The Nats will meet up with John Rigney or Bill Dietrich tomorrow evening.

Of a sudden the Nats have been showing a return to their former power. In their last three games at St. Louis, they scored 25 runs, and the men who are supposed to hit—Walker, Bonura, Lewis and Travis—have been hitting. George Case opened three of their last four games with a hit.

G. U.'s Burke Is Second In College Golf Play

Hoya Ties With Three Others at 71, 1 Stroke Behind Sub-Par Round of Neil Croonquist; L. S. U. in Team Lead With Georgetown 4th

By the Associated Press

Manchester, Vt., June 24.—Neil Croonquist, of Minneapolis, who was graduated from the University of Minnesota a few days ago, rounded out his presidency of the National Collegiate A. A.'s golf division today by leading 145 rivals with a par 70 in the first half of their qualifying test over the Ekwanok course.

While nipping his four closest rivals by a stroke, Croonquist gained his regulation figures by avoiding all the stiff course's roughage and putting superbly while going to the turn in a two-under 33, after collecting three birdies. From there on, however, his putter failed him twice and he came home in 37, after going one over on the thirteenth and fifteenth greens.

Burke Tied for Second

One stroke behind Croonquist were Johnny Burke, of Georgetown, the 1938 N. C. A. A. champion, Stanford's Warren Berl, last year's runner-up; Bill (Ace) Cordingley, of Harvard, and Bill Clark, of Dartmouth.

Sixty-three of the starters were 78 or better and three of them were bunched in the 72 group, Frank Newell, the first University of California at Los Angeles representative to compete in this 43-year-old tourney; Jack Selby, Princeton, and Bert McDowell, Louisiana State, runner-up to Burke two years ago.

Those 75 or better were Warren E. Tansey, of Michigan State; Henry Castillo, of Louisiana State, and John Emery, of the University of Michigan, with 74's, and Cary Middlecoff, the first University of Mississippi entry in this tourney; Ray Higgins, of Georgetown; Tom Leonard, jr., one of New Hampshire's outstanding amateurs, who represented the University of Virginia; Tom Hoak, of Iowa State; Buck Luce, of Texas, and George Sharpe, of L. S. U.

Tigers in Team Lead

Thanks to the sharpshooting of McDowell, Castillo and Sharpe, Louisiana State Tigers gained a half-time lead for the team championship, that is being defended by Stanford, when their four lowest scoring representatives totaled 294 strokes for the first 18 holes of medal play.

The other low team scores were Princeton, 303; Stanford, 304; Georgetown, 305; Illinois, 306; Duke, 307; Iowa State, 308; Ohio State and Texas, 311 each.

After tomorrow's final 18 holes of medal play, which will determine the team championship, the field will be reduced to 64 for match play.

Mungo Is Retired; Studies Operation On His Salary Arm

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, June 24.—The Brooklyn Dodgers announced today that Pitcher Van Lingle Mungo had been placed on the voluntary retired list and would go to Baltimore this week to consult with Dr. George E. Bennett concerning a possible operation on his arm.

MUNGO

Secretary John McDonald said that Mungo would prefer to postpone the operation until after the season closes and that if the physician agreed to this, Mungo would be kept in some capacity such as batting-practice pitcher.

Barney Gedwillas Takes A. A. U. Race At Philadelphia

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 24.—Barney Gedwillas, 27-year-old West Virginia University alumnus in his first marathon race, captured the national A. A. U. 30-kilometer championship today in a run staged as an opening day feature of the Republican National Convention entertainment program.

Gedwillas, of Thomas, W. Va., covered the distance of 18¾ miles in one hour and 50 minutes to finish 75 yards ahead of Don Heinicke, of Baltimore, in a downpour of rain. Joe Sullivan, of Philadelphia, was third.

Twenty five runners started the gruelling race from Convention Hall.

Ernie Crosbie, Baltimore, was fifth; Mike O'Hara, Glencoe, N. Y., sixth, and James Montague, Washington, D. C., tenth.

Jockey Leon Haas Suspended at Aqueduct

Aqueduct, N. Y., June 24 (AP).—Jockey Leon Haas was suspended for ten days, effective Tuesday, to July 5, inclusive, for repeatedly fouling Your Chance in the fifth race Saturday, for which his mount, Snow Ridge, was disqualified from first position.

Technician Wins $2,500 Arlington 'Cap

12,000 See Speedster's Reversal of Form Take Opening Feature

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 24.—Technician, showing a startling reversal of form over recent races, handily captured the $2,500 Inaugural Handicap, opening the 30-day meeting at fashionable Arlington Park today. Cloudy weather, with showers, held the attendance down to 12,000.

Sprinting into the lead at the start, Technician, ridden by the capable jockey, Jack Flinchum, led all the way to defeat Advocator, owned by C. S. Howard, of San Francisco, by two and one-half lengths. Joe Schenck, running as an entry with Technician, was third. Herbert Woolf, Kansas City sportsman, owns the entry.

Only seven went to the post in the 7-furlong sprint out of 23 named for the race. The entry returned $7.80, and $3.40 to place and show. The place on Advocator was $4.60, with $2.80 to show. The winner covered the distance in 1:24.

The Arlington Park meeting is sprinkled with attractive stakes, the first of which will be the $10,000 Matron Handicap for mares and fillies next Saturday.

Bump Simonds Pitches 2-Hit Ball, Wins for Linen

Bump Simonds, who will pitch Saturday in the All-Star game at Griffith Stadium for the benefit of the Red Cross and sponsored by The Washington Post, pitched two-hit ball for Standard Linen last night in Ballston Stadium to shut-out Agriculture, 1 to 0, in a Tri-State League game.

The Linen Softball Club, champion of the Laundry League, was given its margin of victory when Archie Zimmerman knocked in the winning run.

Bobby Riggs Is Defeated At Chicago

Miss Wheeler Loses To Queen of Courts In Finals of Clay Court Championship

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 24.—Young William Donald McNeill, Oklahoma City, and the veteran Alice Marble, of Beverley Hills, Calif., swept major honors today in the National Clay Courts Tennis Tournament, winning the men's and women's singles titles with decisive victories.

McNeill's victim in the most interesting match of the rain-hampered tourney was Bobby Riggs, Chicago, top-ranking amateur of the Nation and also Wimbledon singles titleholder. McNeill employed a forcing game and sharp net attack to knock Riggs out of his fourth national clay courts title. The scores were 6—1, 6—4, 7—9 and 6—3.

Riggs Way Off Form

McNeil, using a driving forehand and smooth backhand with uncanny accuracy, scored 43 placements to Riggs' 33, the former champion being handicapped repeatedly by his own errors, especially at the net. McNeill knocked 42 balls out, Riggs 40, while the winner netted 46 balls to Riggs' 40. Riggs scored three aces and his opponent 2.

The 23-year-old McNeill, who received his degree last week from Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio, goes next to Philadelphia to compete in the national intercollegiate tournament.

Miss Marble disposed of Gracyn Wheeler, Santa Monica, Calif., 7—5, 6—0, in easy fashion, the first set being more decisive than the score indicates. The match was interrupted by rain at 4-all, after which Miss Marble was invincible, taking nine of the next ten games.

Doubles Postponed

The women's doubles final, involving Miss Marble and Mary Arnold, of Los Angeles, and Miss Wheeler and Helen Bernhard, of New York, was postponed until all four arrive at Cincinnati for the Tri-State tournament. The match will be played there probably tomorrow.

Robert Harmon, Berkeley, Calif., and Robert Peacock, Los Angeles, took the men's doubles title Sunday by default after Frank Parker, of Pasadena, Calif., teamed with McNeill for the final, declined to remain over another day.

Frick Suspends, Fines Buc Coach, Player After Tift

By the Associated Press

New York, June 24.—President Ford Frick, of the National League, disclosed today that he had fined Coach Mike Kelly, of the Pittsburgh Pirates, $50 and suspended him for three days and had fined Third Baseman Lee Handley $25 as a result of a disturbance in yesterday's Pittsburgh-Brooklyn double-header.

Manager Frank Frisch, who was banished by umpires along with Kelly and Handley, was not punished.

The Pirates objected to a diving catch made into a double play by Outfielder Joe Vosmick in the tenth inning of the second game. Frisch was ejected early in the argument, but others carried on a violent dispute and Handley tossed a water bucket out of the dugout.

Frick said no protests had been filed for either game of the double-header, although the managers of each team had announced they would protest both games.

Ben Chapman, Indian Patrolman, Now Member Of Four-Eye League and Sees Bright Future

Puts on Glasses as Batting Average Takes A Tail Spin to .250

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, June 24.—Outfielder Ben Chapman deserted today the I-should-wear-glasses-but-I-wont society, which includes a select list of major leaguers whose dwindling batting averages provide the tip-off to their eligibility.

It's more than a suspicion that ball players shun lenses. Some fear their club or the fans will think they are nearly as blind as an umpire with his peepers closed.

Consider Chapman, for instance. Opposing pitchers have been taking the Cleveland fly chaser all season, and his average of .250 today is nothing to cause an outfielder to beat his chest sore.

"I refereed a lot of basketball games in the South last winter," he explained, "and it seemed that every night I had to drive in rain or snow until 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning. My eyes were watering and smarting all the time, so I slipped off to a doctor in Fort Myers, Fla., during spring training. He gave me some stuff to put in them, and told me it might help. The club found out about my eyes when all players had to be examined a few weeks ago, and the club doctor said the same thing.

BEN CHAPMAN

Veteran Figures New Optics Will Give Longer Life in Majors

"So I decided to give glasses a try. They can't hurt my average any, the way I've been hitting. I think I'll be back up there pretty soon—I always get straightened away in July—and if I don't, I'll just stop using them."

He isn't the only one to desert the no-specs society, for Mel Ott, with the New York Giants ever in the National League, took up glasses recently. You can't find Boston's Jimmy Foxx wearing spectacles on the field, but the big slugger has used them in private, like some other players who don't talk much about it.

Pitchers Paul (Dizzy) Trout, of Detroit, and Bill Dietrich, of Chicago; Outfielder Dominic DiMaggio, of Boston, and Russ Peters, Cleveland utility infielder, wear shatterproof lenses on the field.

"I don't see how they can hurt me," Chapman observed. "After all, Chick Hafey, who led the National League in hitting for a long while, used them all the time."

With Shirley Povich

POVICH

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, June 24—The American League rule against players in uniform talking to persons in the stands has been having its farcial aspects . . . In Detroit the other day, umpires who have been ordered to report such matters to League President Will Harridge, cited Coach Red Kress for talking to a man who later proved to be General Manager Jack Zellers of the Tigers . . . In St. Louis, an umpire reported Manager Fred Haney for talking to a man the umpire didn't know was the Brown's traveling secretary who was conferring with Haney on train schedules . . . Lefty Gomez was fined ten bucks the other day for stopping at the batting cage to converse with one of the White Sox . . . The rule against players fraternizing with customers while in uniform was the outgrowth of Gabby Hartnett's tete-a-tete with Al Capone alongside a box seat at Wrigley Field ten years ago . . . when Capone was not exactly regarded as a shining model for American youth.

National Open Champion Lawson Little is piqued at the Professional Golfers Association for not including him in the Vardon trophy ratings . . . despite the fact that he has won at least one major tournament in each of the five years since he turned pro . . . Little is one of the four golfers who have won the Open title at the age of 27 in the past 50 years . . . the supreme optimist in the fellow who signals for a fair catch when a foul ball comes his way in a crowded grandstand . . . Al Weil, of the "can't hurt us" school of fight managers, has lost three of his important meal tickets in the past month . . . Lou Ambers was thoroughly punctured by Lew Jenkins, who took Ambers' lightweight title . . . Weil's Joey Archibald surrendered his featherweight title to Harry Jeffra . . . and Arturo Godoy was disqualified as a big-money headwinner for Weil by Joe Louis . . . Louis dispelled the theory that he has permitted himself to get heavy by weighing in against Godoy at a lighter figure than when he won the title from Jimmy Braddock nearly four years ago . . . The Cleveland Indians have won 10 out of 13 games since their rebellion against Manager Oscar Vitt . . . which ought to be a pretty good answer to their complaint that they couldn't play winning ball under Vitt . . . Anent the beaning of Ducky Medwick, the Cardinals suggest that Coach Charley Dressen was attempting to steal the signs for Medwick and flashed him the fast ball sign when Bowman got loose with the curve that put Medwick in the hospital . . . There has been bad blood between the Cards and the Dodgers ever since Hugh Casey was accused of trying to bean Johnny Padgett of the Cardinals despite the fact that the score at the time was 13 to 3 . . . Bucky Harris lately has taken to giving the pitching signs from the Nats' dugout when his catchers seem to be bollocking the job . . . Clark Griffith can recoup his $35,000 investment in Jimmy Pofahl any time he wants to sell him to the Cubs at that figure . . . On at least one afternoon this season, Joe Cronin, manager of the Red Sox, will have the best pitching staff in the league . . . on the day that he manages the American League's all-star club.

The European war is spoiling the fun for the United States lawn tennis officials who will miss their annual summer junket abroad at the expense of the U. S. L. T. A. . . . Al Blozis has brought Georgetown University more publicity with his shot-putting feats than all of Georgetown's football teams . . . his track exploits won't hurt his chances for all-American nomination when he returns to his job as tackle on the Georgetown eleven next fall . . . We just found out that a mile and 70 yard race is 40 yards shorter than a mile and a sixteenth . . . Fence posts around the better race tracks are placed one-length apart to aid the chart callers in giving positions of the horses . . . Daily double betting was born at a dog track near St. Louis and originated in horse racing at the Fair Grounds track nearby . . . Promoter Mike Jacobs is silently rooting for Tony Galento to beat Max Baer next month . . . because New York would not stand for another Louis-Bear affair while a Galento-Louis bout would draw close to a million-dollar gate.

The Yankees, who protested a night game in Chicago last week, have never won a protest in the league. The Yanks would bring their star infielders, Jerry Priddy and Phil Rizzuto, up from Kansas City instantly if the front office were not afraid of offending Kansas City fans . . . Frank Higgins of the Tigers was to be traded for Harland Clift of the Browns until he started the recent home run spree that saved his job . . . If the Indians, perchance, win the pennant Oscar Vitt can justly lay claim to being the modern miracle manager . . . it would prove above all else that ball teams win pennants not out of loyalty to their manager but out of pure desire to get into the big dough . . . It is just as well that Joe Cronin is managing the American League All-Star team this year . . . with his anemic batting average it is the only way Cronin could get on the All-Star team this season.

Kehoe, Fields, March to Run In A.A.U. Meet

Trio to Represent Washington A. A. At Fresno Friday

Sending men to a track meet for the first time, the newly-formed Washington Athletic Association will have three strong representatives in the National A. A. U. junior and senior championships Friday and Saturday at Fresno, Calif.

Jim Kehoe and Tommy Fields, mainstays of the crack University of Maryland squad this past spring, and Harry March, University of North Carolina's ace hurdler and relay man, will carry the colors of the local club against the top track performers of the country.

Kehoe, Southern Conference 880-champion, will compete in his specialty. Fields, conference 2-mile champion, will run in the 3,000 meters while March will enter the 400-meter hurdles, an event he won in the Penn Carnival.

Kehoe, who finished fourth in the N. C. A. A. half-mile, and Fields and March, who were in Minneapolis last week for the N. C. A. A. meet, continued from there to the Coast.

Meantime, Mason Chronister, Maryland miler, and Alan Miller, Terp 220 and 440 runner, will be in Baltimore today to take a physical examination that they hope will win them commissions in the Marine Corps. College graduates with R. O. T. C. experience, Chronister and Miller would, upon acceptance, automatically receive the grade of second lieutenants.

Ann Powell Hurt, X-Rays to Decide Her Tennis Fate

For the second straight day the semifinal City of Washington girls' tournament match between Ann Powell and Mary Brookings was postponed yesterday and will be played at Friends School today or else Miss Powell will forfeit. Ann, suffering from a bad wrist, was to learn in a morning the result of X-rays.

All finals of the tournament will be played tomorrow. In the singles, Margaret Parsons will meet either Miss Powell or Miss Brookings. The doubles final will bring together Betty Jacob and Anne Cullen, and Ruth Johnson and Marjorie Snowden while Anne Cullen and Miriam Weissman will play for the consolation singles championship.

Four Homers Help Browns Beat A's, 9-4

Walt Judnich Hits Two as Auker Wins Sixth Victory

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 24.—Four home runs, one with two men on base, were hit by the St. Louis Browns today in defeating Philadelphia's Athletics, 9 to 4.

Harland Clift's seventh homer of the year drove in two runners ahead of him in the four-run sixth. Walt Judnich notched his ninth of the season right after Clift's blow. He had clouted his eighth in the third. Don Heffner got his first homer of the year in the fifth.

Elden Auker, batted out of the box only last Saturday by Washington, held the A's to two hits in the first five innings and gained his sixth victory of the year against five defeats.

While the Browns' scoring ended in the sixth, Philadelphia scored its first runs in that inning on Al Brancato's single, Wally Moses' double, an infield out and Bob Johnson's single. Two more were added in the eighth. Bennie McCoy singled, Johnson walked, Dick Siebert drove McCoy home with a single and Johnson scored from third as Frank Hayes filed to Rip Radcliff.

Len Burrage, Ice Hockey Star, Back Here to Work

Len Burrage, whose sammy play with the Washington Eagles last season earned him the nickname of the "Old Fox," is due to arrive here today from Canada to work for S. G. Loeffler, who also is his ice hockey boss.

Despite several offers to play with or coach other teams, Burrage will again be with the Eagles next season, a bit of news that is not a little welcome to Coach Redvers Mackenzie.

Coach Littman Picks Nine From Squad Of 29 for Contest WithHeurichSaturday

By Bill Burnett

The "experts" who picked The Washington Post All-District Schoolboy nine from public and private schools in the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia are expected to be shown in their true colors today.

Morton Littman, youthful coach and manager of the all-District club which will face the Heurich Brewers Saturday at Griffith Stadium in a double-header for the benefit of the Red Cross will send his players through their first drill together. The workout will take place on the Ellipse at 3 p. m. And from an anticipated turnout of 25 first and second team stars and honorable mentions, Littman will chose the nine youngsters he will send against the veteran Brewers.

For four years a highly successful sandlot guide, Littman's selections will be made with one purpose in mind. Publicity build-ups of various stars will be forgotten and the 20-year-old coach will be concentrating on one thing ——"beat Heurich."

Early indications point to a slight variance in Littman's choices and those which Post "experts" placed on the no-longer-mythical nine. Whatever they are, however, fans who expect to see the stadium twin bill may look to a nip-and-tuck battle.

Opening the Saturday session—called "Sandlot Day" because it gives Washington's amateur baseball players and enthusiasts a chance to back the Red Cross' war fund drive as well as show off their own talents—is a softball game with all the appeal of the baseball finale. Senate Beer, with Southpaw Abe Rosenfield on the mound, clashes with an all-star club picked by Vic Baratte from his Sport Center Sunday League.

Sale of tickets began yesterday at all down-town sports goods stores and at The Washington Post sports department. There will be no reserved seats, all seats going at the same price—50 cents.

First ball Saturday will be thrown out by a Red Cross official promptly at 2 p. m.

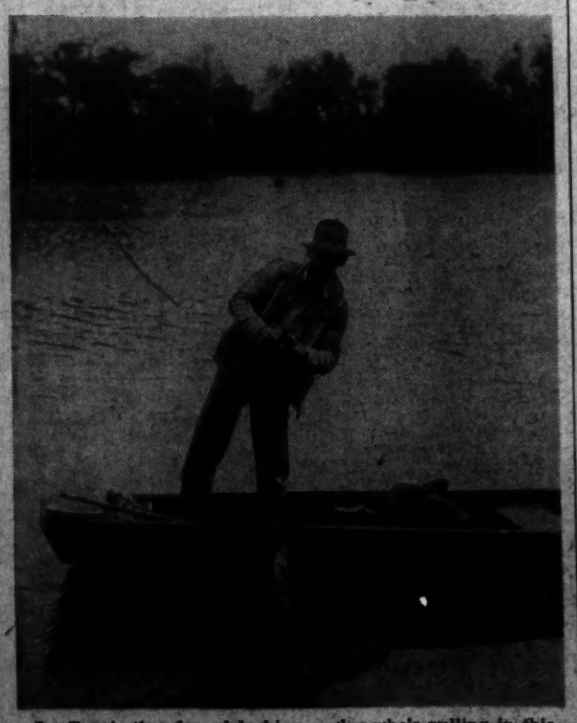
Next Scene—the Frying Pan



Joe Ray is the pleased-looking angler who's pulling in this nice-sized 3-pound bass down at Lake Phelps in North Carolina. Not the largest in the lake, it's one of the more tasty. Bass are placed in the lake from State fish hatcheries and the more wily ones avoid anglers long enough to attain a weight of eight or more pounds

Bill Ackerman On Fishing

Capt. Taft Tippett, well-known fishing guide of Ridge, Md., has been catching several tautogs, or oyster fish, almost every time out during the past ten days. It is a Dewey Beach, Del., angler, however, who takes the palm when it comes to catching these tough babies. Fishing with a friend some days ago he boated a 3-foot specimen that, upon being opened, disclosed the fact that the fish had swallowed a 4-pound duck.

ACKERMAN

A 1,453 pound gray shark, for it was identified as such by the internationally known Col. Hugh Wise, of Princeton, to be such and the largest ever to be caught off the Jersey shore, was brought into Brielle last week by the mackerel-fisherman Dolphin. It was taken in 25 minutes on quarter-inch manila about 7 miles offshore. The gray shark is the most ferocious of the man-eaters and rare in northern waters.

Fly rods have other uses than merely casting the tiny flies usually associated with them. Various forms of artificial lures, including small spinners and spoons, and worms as well as other live baits, can all be used with fly rods and to excellent advantage. Such lures are impossible with baitcasting rods and very probably the reason why fly rods are coming into almost universal use among sportsmen.

Capt. Bill Hatch, guide with Capt. Doug Osborne on the Lerner-American Museum of Natural History expedition to the coast of South America, hasn't been so kind with pictures of this trip as he was while down under the previous year. Yet we learn this week the fishing has been far better in spite of bad weather.

Reports of catches of school tuna along the Jersey shore has local big gamefish anglers champing at the bit. Harry Kinnear and Bob Escaday, waiting for over a week for a break in the weather got away yesterday to meet Capt. Lev Raymond and his Lev-Lou at Atlantic City for a try off Beach Haven and Manasquan.

These school tuna are always on the dot when the time comes, and this year is no exception. Mid-June and they started taking anglers lures south of Jones Inlet, just as though they had made an appointment before leaving on their Southern hegira last September.

Striper fishing, if you are going to get the big fellows, is tricky. There are certain places they hang out, and usually but one of two guides, who fish those places, that really know how to catch them.

At Tall Timbers it is Capt. Bill Goldsborough, at Galesville, Capt. Crandall Treft, and at Solomons, on the Patuxent, the palm seems to belong to Capt. Rhody Langley. He fishes Point Patience at certain times and on the right tides and takes the whoppers consistently. With good going at Tall Timbers and Eastern Bay we are wondering why there is no news from Solomons.

Sports Picture All Confusion At Riverside

Wrestling returns to Riverside stadium for a brief stand tomorrow night, but just what's coming next—walkathon, boxing, or more groan artistry—remained a question yesterday.

Reports circulated that Ray Alvis, former partner of Riverside Owner-Promoter S. G. Leoffler, had leased the stadium for a 52-day walkathon starting July 4 and that he had plans which would keep the vast arena occupied until ice hockey takes over next fall.

Jimmy Erwin, who promoted three boxing shows that grew steadily worse, was on his way back to Washington yesterday, however, and a Riverside spokesman said he did not see "how they are going to keep boxing out of such an ideal spot as Riverside."

"If Erwin had come back to Washington when he was supposed to there would have been boxing in there," it was said. Leoffler was attending to a business matter in Georgia yesterday and is expected here tomorrow, while Erwin is to arrive late this week.

Rudy meets Warren Bockwinkel, Frank Sexton is Ernie's partner and the preliminaries trot out Bob Russell versus Ed White, and Ralph Garabaldi against Ed Newman.

Pepco Beats Gas Light Nine, 5 to 0

Garvey allowed Gas Light Company's nine only six scattered hits yesterday to lead Pepco to a 5-0 victory in the first of a three-game playoff series for the first-half title of the United States Government League.

Pepco bunched their seven hits off Stover and Wallach to count two runs in the first inning and the last three in the fifth, five Gas Light errors helping production of tallies.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Philadelphia, June 24.—Senator Taft, the red-blooded deep sea fisherman from Ohio, was saying tonight in one of his press conferences that there are about 1,500,000 able-bodied young American males who would be eligible for each class in the proposed conscription field.

CONSIDINE

So we got to thinking that there must therefore be in the neighborhood of 10,000,000 healthy young men between the ages of 18 and 25—men with better than the average command of their muscles and minds. Out of that 10,000,000 there must be 1,000,000 between the weights of 175 and 220 pounds. And out of those million heavyweights there must be at least 250,000 full-blooded, two-fisted, iron-chinned blokes with a natural punch in both hands, intelligence enough to learn the rules, and ambition enough to want to pick up the easy dough that is lying around the prize ring.

And yet we learn from the latest N. B. A. ranking that the leading challenger for Joe Louis' title is a beer-drinking, poker-playing, evil old man named Tony Galento who was thoroughly knocked out by Louis a year ago. Not only that but the others on the ranking list are for the greater part the same tired old bums who have been around for years, and, like the lady shopper walking down an up escalator, going no place. All of those who have met Louis have been knocked cold by him, and those who haven't would be. Or will be.

Now what of those 250,000 lean, lithe, clean-living, ambitious young heavyweights? Wouldn't you think that some smart manager would rope a passel of them at random and make a fortune—with the heavyweight division in its present doldrums?

We were fretting over this situation tonight in the I. N. S. press room, here at this corny carnival, when who should mosey up, leading a pleasant young brute, but Harry Lenny. Lenny is the great old-time fight manager, first white man to work in Joe Louis' corner, and a recognized authority of long standing. He is a proud man, and has been known to tear up the contracts of money-making fighters because they wouldn't obey him. He hasn't been around Jacobs Beach for some time now, and a lot of the boys thought he had retired in disgust.

We told him about the 250,000 would-be champions, and wondered where they were, and Harry said:

"I want you should meet Steve Martin. Take a good look at this kid, for he's one fighter in a thousand. Maybe one in your 250,000."

Martin is a strong, nice-looking kid, 22, 6 feet 3, big hands, compact looking. He is half Irish, half Italian, but looked no different from the young heavies you see around the gyms.

"He's so different he's restored my faith in boxing," Lenny said, with some feeling. "He's different because he wants to fight."

We said we thought all of them did, or they'd never buy those leather mittens.

"Don't kid yourself, I know," Lenny said. "The boys of this country have lost interest in fighting. In the last couple of years I've talked to maybe 3,000 young men—big, tough, strong. And they don't want to fight. At least they don't want to learn how to fight, how to train, how to take the grind. All they want is to know how much they get, and want to get in there with some bum who can't hurt them.

"Take this kid. He showed me he was okay the first day I took him. I ast him to run 10 miles on the road, so he ran 10 miles. I showed him a hook, and he picked it up like that, and a jab, and the way to move around. I told him it might take four or five years to make him a good fighter, and he said 'I don't care if it takes ten—so long as I learn.'

I kept him in the gym for a few weeks and then I decided to find out in a hurry whether he was worth my time. We were down South and I put him in against the toughest young heavy in the South, fellow named Allen. At ten rounds, too. Well, Steve beat Allen and could have gone another 20 heats Then I put him in there against the South's hardest hitter, fellow named Hard Rock Harding—Pa Stribling's got him—and Hard Rock hit him an awful belt on the chin. But Steve laughed, and licked him in ten, without drawing a deep breath.

"Now these are just bums. Third raters. But all of them are third raters today," Lenny snorted. "There aren't no more second raters. Just Louis, and then the third raters begin. I'm going to try to get Gus Dorazio next for Steve, then take him through the West. Maybe 30 or even 40 fights in the next year and a half. And when I bring him into New York I'm bringing in the champion—ready made, ready to take over."

Dacotah Wins Charles Town Third to Complete $532 Double

Great Riding By Martinez Caps Climax

Mrs. Sprague's Mare Pays $72 to Bring Longest Double Of Current Series

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 24.—Jockey Armondo Fidel Martinez was the horse of today's racing. The Cuban boy, who once rode for the Denemark stable, put the finishing touches on the longest daily double of the meeting, a $532.20 pay-off. He took Dacotah, a mare purchased recently by Mrs. C. H. Sprague, to the top and held her there throughout the third race, winning by two and a half lengths and forcing the mutuel department to scrape up $72.40 for each holder of a $2 ticket.

Those who coupled Kai-Min, favorite winner of the second race with Dacotah were those who collected the best twin wager mutuel of the season here. Jockey Buddy Root gave Kai-Min a powerful stretch ride to be up in the concluding jumps.

Wins Feature, Too

But Martinez's success for the day did not end with his Dacotah victory. He came back in the day's feature, the Upshur Purse, a $1,000 affair, and brought W. R. Robert's Irish Moon to the wire a length in advance of Mrs. M. Knieriem's Red Wrack. Vendor's Lien was third in the field of eight operating at 6 furlongs.

Irish Moon showing a fine stretch rush paid $11 and was clocked in 115 2-5, only one-fifth over the track record shared by Lady Buck, Blahblah and Consistent, the latter among today's also rans.

Martinez had what the horsemen call "dead aim" on the leaders virtually from the start. He rated Irish Moon almost to the stretch, shook up the mare and then settled into a hand ride that wore down Ravenhurst, the pacemaker, and staved off the closing bid of the favored Red Wrack.

Ace of Trumps Claimed

W. W. Waters lost his one-horse stable when Mrs. Thomas Lewis claimed Ace of Trumps out of the fourth race after the 5-year-old gelding had come from last position to win at a $6.60 mutuel. Mrs. Lewis paid $800 for the son of Jack High.

Jockey Sammy Palumbo took W. Anderson's Allen Caid to the front at once and had him there throughout the running of the sixth race, at a mile and a quarter . . . Allen Caid was the $1.40 favorite in a field of seven.

STEPPING IN lacked early foot, came wide for racing room and closed resolutely. VITASCOPE had good early speed and weakened. IRA L. closed with a rush.

STEALING HOME, well placed from the beginning, saved ground and closed gamely, but was no match for the winner. CIRCUS LIGHTS was forced wide at the turns, came with good energy in the stretch and might have been best. ANYA was shuffled back in the early stages and closed with a belated rush. Mrs. John Jouett Wins WJSV-C.B.S. Cup Golf

28 Handicap Helps Winner To a Net 72

Mrs. H. L. Simcoe Wins Low Gross, 97; Three Tie at 75 For 2d Low Net

Mrs. John Jouett, a 28-handicapped player from Columbia Country Club, won the inaugural WJSV-C. B. S. Cup tournament yesterday at the Washington Golf and Country Club over a starting field of 79 class B players, with handicaps from 19 to 36.

Mrs. Jouett, who won the eighth flight in the District championship last week at Kenwood, played each nine in 50 for an even 100 strokes and deducted the 28 handicap for a net 72. The winner's card included treys on all but one of the par 3 holes. She took a double bogey 5 on the second, but on the ninth and eleventh and fourteenth she was down in three strokes.

Wins Low Gross

Low gross went to the former Manor Club women's chairman, Mrs. H. L. Simcoe, who started with three pars and played the front nine in 44 strokes and then came back in 53 for a 97. Mrs. Simcoe's back nine included a pair of 8's, but she played the other holes well and finished a shot ahead of a clubmate, Mrs. C. F. Rhodes, and Mrs. J. A. Anderson, Argyle, who were second with 98.

Mrs. Jouett receives possession of the huge trophy donated to the women golfers by the broadcasting company for one year. It was her first victory in a medal play tournament.

Three tied with net 75's for second place with Mrs. J. A. Anderson winning second prize in a draw. Mrs. Anderson scored two 49's for a 98 minus a 23 handicap for a net 75 while Mrs. Corham Freer, of the host club, was second with 48-52, 99-24, 75, and Mrs. C. F. Rhodes, Manor, was third in the draw with 98-23, 75.

Mrs. Young Has 78

Mrs. R. D. Young, Washington, was along at 101-23, 78 for fifth low net while sixth was also a three-way tie. Mrs. E. C. Kochersperger, of the host club, scored 109-30, 79, and was drawn out first followed by Mrs. E. A. Swingle, Congressional, with 103-24, 79, and Mrs. G. M. Jani, Congressional, 103-24, 79.

Five tied with net 80's for the last two prizes and Mrs. Otto Thacker, Washington, with 109-29, 80, and Mrs. H. Harrigan, Congressional, 106-26, 80, won in the draw. However, additional prizes were provided for Mrs. D. Kane, Kenwood, 99-19, 80; Mrs. J. E. McCabe, Washington, 101-20, 80, and Mrs. W. R. Russell, Army and Navy, 109-29, 80.

Bob Bensinger Hits a Tartar But Wins Match

Threadgill Carries Favorite to 3 Sets In District Tennis

By Jack Munhall

Contenders for the City of Washington junior tennis title who had virtually conceded the crown to Bobby Bensinger were wondering yesterday if they might have been a bit premature after the top-seeded player ran into difficulty in the second round at Columbia County Club.

Bensinger, diminutive Takoma Academy student and national boys' indoor titleholder, was carried to three sets by Bob Threadgill, University of Florida freshman, before winning a hard-fought match, 3—6, 6—2, 6—0. Earlier Bensinger had breezed through his first round encounter with a 6—2, 6—0 verdict over Bob Furniss, jr.

Threadgill, tall and lanky and operating behind a barrage of backhand cross-court placements had Bensinger running as no local foe has done in years in that first set. But Bobby smartened up quickly and in the two succeeding sets baffled his 'gator opponent with a drop-shot attack.

Three Surprises

The unexpected opposition offered Bensinger, last year's District boy's champion, was one of three surprises marking yesterday's opening of the boys' and junior tournaments.

The others were the elimination of the fourth-seeded players in both junior and boys' divisions. Upset in the boys' competition was Delos Smith of Friends School who fell before LeRoy Morgan, son of the Chevy Chase Club tennis committee chairman, 6—1, 2—6, 6—2, while ranking Arthur Farrington of Roosevelt High School lost to Charles Hackney, 17-year-old Western High School ace, 4—6, 6—4, 8—6, in one of the best matches of the day.

Play generally was torrid, though Tom Wadden, the North Carolina University star who is expected to make it hot for Bensinger, had it easy trimming Billy Howard, 6—0, 6—0, with a great display of tennis. Wadden, former District boys' ruler, is seeded second among the juniors. Meantime third-seeded Ben Fisher defeated Lester Boykin, 6—0 and 6—2.

Peter Fratt Winner

Leland Junior High's top-seeded Peter Fratt, in the boys' division, justified his ranking, with a 6—0, 6—0 whitewashing of Jerry Mayfield. Second-seeded Sam Doyle of Friends turned back Peter DiSibour, 6—1, 6—2, and third-seeded Ned Sacks, of St. Albans, triumphed over Francis Moran after a terrific fight, 5—7, 9—7, 7—5.

Play goes into the quarterfinals in both divisions today, with the top junior match expected to develop at 3:30, when formidable Sterling Lee, of Edgemoor Club, engages Wadden. An attractive boys' match should be that between Doyle and Don Forman, who was impressive in beating Jack Sloat, 6—0, 6—1, yesterday.

The first victim of ineligibility was Bill Gaines, who had to forfeit his first-round match to Harry Ong when it was learned he was over the 17-year age limit. Gaines had been ignorant of the restriction.

Doubles competition will open tomorrow.

Second round—Walts defeated Bullen, 6—2, 6—4; Bensinger defeated Bob Threadgill, 3—6, 6—2, 6—0; Carl Maier defeated Carson Jones, 6—2, 4—6, 6—3; Hackney defeated Helfrich, 6—3, 2—6, 6—4; Tom Wadden defeated Billy Howard, 6—0, 6—0; Sterling Lee defeated Oscar Thorup, 6—3, 6—2; Ben Fisher defeated Lester Boykin, 6—0, 6—2.

Houghton's 69 Wins Pro' Sweeps Tourney

Beaver Dam Player, Over Par Five Times, Drops as Many Birdie Putts for Great Round on Muddy Course; Tie for Second

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Al Houghton played one of his best rounds yesterday at Chevy Chase where the Beaver Dam professional went over par five times but finished with a regulation 69 as he dropped five birdie putts, an unusual feat over the watered-fairway layout.

Houghton's score won a pro sweepstakes tournament by three shots while his partner, Maury Fitzgerald, of Kenwood, got a free ride in the pro-amateur tournament as Houghton's score alone was better than the best ball of any of the other pro-am teams.

Host Professional Robert T. Barnett and his golf shop assistant, Virgil (Buck) Worsham, were each three strokes back of Houghton with 72s in the pro sweepstakes play, while the latter's older brother, Lew Worsham, Burning Tree pro, was next with a 73.

Bogart Has 70

Second team in the pro-amateur play was Buck Worsham and D. C. Amateur Champion Ralph Bogart, whose best ball 70 was one shot higher than Houghton's individual score. Bogart had 74 but he could only help Worsham's 72 by two strokes.

In a meeting preceding the tournament, the ten local professionals attending voted unanimously to accept Bobby Cruickshank's invitation to play the P. G. A. qualifying rounds over the James River course of the Country Club of Virginia. Barnett will forward the proposal to Middle Atlantic P. G. A. president, Ralph Beach, who has already set Baltimore as the scene of the qualifying rounds.

Toney Penna, touring professional for one of the major sporting goods companies and runner-up to Jimmy Demaret in the Western Open, arrived a little late for the tournament yesterday but he played nine holes later. Penna and Barnett opposed Lew Worsham and Leo Walper in a nine-hole match that finished all square, while Penna won the four-man sweeps with a par 34 to Walper's 35.

Houghton's card included seven threes, also a very unusual accomplishment at Chevy Chase, where there is a premium on bridie threes as well as the par three holes.

He dropped a 40-foot putt on the fourteenth for a birdie and a 25-footer on four while his birdies on 8, 12 and 17 resulted from approach shots dead to the pin. However he missed enough shots to go over par five times.

His card with par:

Houghton out	454	334	443	—34
Par in	344	344	444	—34—68

D.C. Cricket Club Wins in Baltimore

The Washington Cricket Club returned to town yesterday with its eighth straight victory—a 107-run margin over the Colonial Cricket Club in Baltimore. The score was 162 to 55.

The local band of Americanized Britons who insist on sticking to their mother country's national version of baseball is undefeated this year. Manager Harold Bennett again did a ripping good job of it by scoring 72 of his team's runs—more than the entire amount by the opposition.

Md. Women's Golf Tourney Starts Today

Mrs. Sloman, Defending Champion, Tops Field Of 55 Contestants

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 24.—Approximately 55 contestants, headed by Mrs. Jerome Sloman, the defending champion, will tee off tomorrow in the 18-hole qualifying round of the five-day Maryland Women's Golf Championship.

One 18-hole match round is scheduled each day from Wednesday through Saturday.

Completion of the Washington, D. C., Women's Title Tourney Friday was held responsible for the fact only five Capital entries were listed in the Maryland event. Many District players indicated they feared two week-long contests in a row would involve too great a physical strain.

The five Washington women entered were Mrs. Myron Davy, Congressional; Mrs. L. G. Pray and Mrs. Walter Stokes, Manor; Mrs. Betty Meckley, Kenwood, a former titleholder, and Mrs. Leo Walper, Capital runner-up last year, who was a post entry.

Maryland State Junior Play Opens

While five of the leading women golfers from the District start the battle for the women's crown at Hillendale, a dozen Washington junior golfers will battle for the Maryland State junior crown today over the nearby Terra Mariae course. A field of 40 will play 36 holes medal play for the title vacated by Buddy Sharkey. The age limit is 20 and under.

Billy Metro, Former Mat Great, To Referee Thursday's Battle

Billy Metro, old-time wrestler now living in Washington, has been called in to referee Thursday night's battle royal which features Promoter Turner's wrestling show for the benefit of the Needy Children's Camp Fund at his Fourteenth and W streets arena.

The characters who'll perform in the mass mayhem spectacle include Zim Zam Zum, the Irish Angel, Juan Olaguivel, Al Norcus and John Bognar—a carload of villains and wrestling freaks to tempt the most demanding fan.

Metro is expected to take charge of the "royal" end, while Casey Berger will be assigned the "scientific" match between Dropkick Murphy and Gino Martinelli.

"I'll take no stuff from these fellows who try to get rough—I'll throw them right out of that ring and disqualify them if they won't listen to me," Metro chortled, thinking fondly back to the days when he used to exchange groans with such greats as the Zbysko brothers, Charles Cutler, Martina Piestina and others.

In a special 30-minute exhibition, Karol Krauser will meet Felix Slovikowski. Tickets for the benefit show go on sale at Turner's Arena today, and a portion of the receipts will help defray the expenses of some 200 children to summer camps around Washington.

Commodities Head Lower; Wheat Rallies

Key Raw Materials For Defense All Show Downward Trend

By the Associated Press

Prices headed downward yesterday over a broad front in major commodity markets while traders considered the possibility of a Europe completely under German domination.

Wheat at Chicago displayed more resistance than most other staples. After losing almost a cent early, the final price range was ¼ lower to ⅛ lower. Corn, however, dropped ⅜ to 1⅛. Milling interests supported prices most of the session.

Demands for the spot cotton delivery tended to steady the balance of the list, although closing prices were 10 cents a bale higher to 25 lower. First notice day comes Tuesday. Key armament raw materials moved uniformly downward, including copper, hides, rubber, cocoa, sugar and wool tops. Silk, coffee and cottonseed oil followed suit.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 wholesale spot commodities, based on 1926 as 100, declined to 71.98 from 71.99 Saturday.

Wheat Drop Erased

Chicago, June 24 (AP).—Wheat prices fell ⅛@⅞ cent in the first few minutes of trading today largely because of beneficial rains over the week-end in the spring wheat belt and then spent the rest of the session working back to around Saturday's close.

Wheat closed ¼ lower to ⅛ higher compared with Saturday.

July corn, which fell about a cent, pulled the deferred deliveries lower. Receipts of 381 cars resulted in a ¼@¾ cent lower spot market but most of this corn was Government owned. Oats followed corn while rye fluctuated with wheat. Lard reflected liberal hog receipts at principal markets which was offset by prospects of futher relief purchases.

New York, June 24 (AP).—Demand for domestic sugar futures was fettered today by issuance of notices to deliver on the July contract. Final prices were 2 to 3 points lower.

Trade in the world contract reflected uneasiness regarding effect of war developments on demand for raw sugar and sales totaled only 2,350 tons. Prices were 2½ to 4½ points down; July 1.04B, September, 1.06½B.

No. 3 range follows:

Freight Trucking In May Reaches High for Year

The volume of revenue freight transported by motor truck in May reached the highest level recorded for any month this year, according to tonnage reports compiled and released by the American Trucking Association, whose headquarters are in Washington.

Comparable reports received from 194 motor carriers in 37 States and the District of Columbia showed that the May volume was 5.3 per cent above that of April, and 12 per cent above that of May, 1939, the association said. These carriers transported an aggregate of 1,110,853 tons in May, against 1,055,326 in April, and 991,486 in May, last year.

The A. T. A. index figure, computed on the basis of the 1926 monthly average tonnage of the reporting carriers as representing 100, stood at 139.99 for May. In April, the index figure was 133.29; in May, 1939, it was 125.16.

Approximately 78 per cent of all the freight transported during the month was reported by carriers of "general merchandise." The volume of general merchandise carried increased 4.9 per cent over April, and 11.6 per cent over May, 1939.

Lumber Production Off 1% During Week

Lumber production during the week ended June 15 was 1 per cent less than in the previous week; shipments were 8 per cent less and new business 1 per cent less, according to reports to the National Lumber Manufacturers Association.

The industry stood at 72 per cent of the seasonal weekly average of 1929 production and 69 per cent of average 1929 shipments.

Duluth Ready to Ship Corn and Rye Abroad

Duluth, Minn., June 24 (AP).—More than 1,000,000 bushels of corn and rye will leave the Duluth harbor within the next 24 hours for foreign consumption, most likely to feed the British Isles, it was reported in board of trade circles today.

Four vessels are in port today taking on 920,000 bushels of corn—one of the largest single day corn shipments in the history of the port—and 150,000 bushels of rye.

Harrison Remains At Reserve Helm

New York, June 24 (AP).—Alfred L. Aiken, chairman of the board of New York Life Insurance Co., today announced the board of directors of that institution had deferred until January 1, 1941, the effective date of the appointment of George L. Harrison to the presidency of the company.

Harrison, who is now president of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, was to have become president of the life insurance company on July 1. The effective date of the appointment was postponed, Aiken said, at the request of the board of directors of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, with the concurrence of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, because of the international situation.

10,000,000 Pounds Of Dry Skim Milk Sought by British

Chicago, June 24 (AP).—The British food ministry has offered to buy 250 carloads of dry skimmed milk from American producers, the Chicago Mercantile Exchange said today.

The 250 carloads are equivalent to about 10,000,000 pounds. The United States produces 410,000,000 pounds of dry skimmed milk annually, of which 1,232,000 pounds are exported, the exchange said.

Tin Shortage May Result In Silver-Lined Cans

Denver, June 24 (INS).—Cans lined with silver if the war shuts off the United States' imports, were foreseen today by J. P. Gill, of Pittsburgh, president of the American Society for Metals.

He admitted that the cost of a can of pork and beans plated with silver might be a few cents more than at present, but pointed out that tin—imported chiefly from the Dutch East Indies—may become so scarce the price would rise anyhow.

Slight Boost in 1941 Auto Prices Forecast

Detroit, June 24 (AP).—Car prices, says Ward's Automotive Reports in its current issue, can be expected to increase slightly with the announcement of 1941 models.

Taxes, higher living costs and increases in certain raw matrials as well as expectancy of wage adjustments, it adds, "will make for increased prices as the inflationary cycle proceeds."

Assets of the 28 local building and loan associations passed the $150,000,000 mark in May for the first time in history, according to the District of Columbia Building and Loan League.

As of May 31, total assets were reported at $150,462,000, against $147,021,000 on April 30.

The league's report, released yesterday also noted that mortgage loans as of May 31 advanced to $140,685,000, an increase of $3,355,000 over the April 30 figures. Total surplus of the member units remains in excess of $10,500,000.

A breakdown of the 956 mortgage loans approved during May finds 215 were made for construction purposes, totaling $1,290,000; 277 advances were for financing new houses or $1,386,000, while 444 other loans aggregated $1,699,000.

F. Willson Camp, secretary of the league, stated yesterday that about 1,000 new share accounts were being opened during the month, with an unusually small number of closeouts. Share account members now possess nearly $133,000,000 in the 28 associations, he added.

Syndicate Offers $38,000,000 Issue Of Jersey Central

New York, June 24 (AP).—A new issue of $38,000,000 Jersey Central Power & Light Co. 3¼ per cent 1st mortgage bonds, due 1965, was offered today by a syndicate headed by First Boston Corp., E. H. Rollins & Sons, and Halsey, Stuart & Co. The bonds were priced at 102½ plus interest.

Proceeds of the loan, it was planned, will be applied to redemption of $42,225,000 outstanding 1st mortgage bonds of the company bearing a higher coupon rate.

The offering, bond men said, was the first large-sized corporate financing since U. S. Steel sold $75,000,000 debentures in early May. Despite the Jersey Central issue, however, new financing in June was expected to be the smallest since last October.

Advance in Nonwar Issues Marks Dull Trade; Utilities and Rails Cautiously Edge Forward; Politics Overshadows War in Street Talk

New York, June 24.—Power and light shares claimed a major share of the attention in Wall Street's trading today but otherwise the market was dull and price changes were insignificant. Judged by the composite average the list advanced 0.38 point and this was accomplished with little help from the divisions otehr than the utilities.

The war stocks held on but got no where and the equipments, which recently were boomed on the assumption that the companies which made freight cars could just as easily make tanks, settled back slightly. Rails were next in line after the producers of kilowatt hours.

In othe words it was a market in which the non-war issues featured. Trading was light. Only 471,900 shares changed hands, which is slightly better than last Friday but not enough to put the brokerage fraternity in a good mood.

Politics Occupies Street

The Republican national convention, the war and domestic business news share honors for Wall Street's attention and it is with a long sigh of relief that one can report that the first named, for the time being at least, ranked somewhat above the war in its claim on the minds of investors.

No one of the various candidates prominently mentioned for the Republican nomination is going to give Wall Street any favors, and none are asked, but those who forego present pleasures to save their money and buy a bond—and thus contribute to the normal functioning of our industrial machinery—are sick and tired of the crackpot economics doctrines which have been fostered in Washington in the last seven years.

It is the belief of well over half of those whom one encounters in the financial district that Wendell Willkie, because of his demonstrated ability to handle a large enterprise and his knowledge of national affairs, is the one who must be selected if we are to be guaranteed a return to business principles in government.

Willkie Is Favored

This is the Street's view, and it must be realized that Wall Street reflects the opinion of investors in all sections and of businessmen throughout the Nation. A good portion of these feel that if there is a deal which eliminates Willkie, they might as well go fishing on election day.

Business news today centered about the weekly report of steel operations. Despite the fact that the British have taken over the bulk of the orders previously let here by the French, there has been some falling off of steel operations. For the first time in nine weeks there was a recession in the operating rate. It stands now at 96.5 per cent of capacity compared with 97.7 per cent the previous week. The drop is not large, but it represented a reversal in trend.

Air transportation issues were prominent in today's trading, following the public utilities. United Air Lines and Pan American both were active and higher. Of the day's 15 most active stocks, ten were Public Utilities and two were Air Line stocks. The price trend of these leaders was to slightly higher levels. Among less active stocks, Commonwealth & Southern preferred jumped 4½ points, Telephone 1¼, Public Service of New Jersey, a point, and Westinghouse 2½.

Bond Trading Dull

German and Italian obligations again were the only interesting performers in dull bond trading on the stock exchange. The New York Herald Tribune average of 30 bonds gained 0.01 as a decline in industrials almost over balanced a moderate rise in rail and utility liens.

Issues of Balkan states gained moderately as the prospect for peace in south and eastern Europe improved.

German and Italian industrial obligations gained substantially. Lombard Electric 7s of 1952 rose 5⅝ to 47¾, and Rhinelbe Union 3½s of 1946 gained 6 points to 20. Rhine Westphalia 6s of 1952 gained 3¾ to 17¼.

All United States Government issues were off save the 3⅛ of 1941 which showed an unimportant rise of 1-32.

Mills to Reduce Steel Production To 86.5% Rate

New York, June 24 (AP).—The Nation's steel mills will trim operating schedules 1.2 points to 86.5 per cent of capacity this week, first reduction in nine weeks, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

This compared with 76.9 per cent a month ago and 54.3 per cent a year ago.

Steel circles said the decline was due primarily to suspension of activity on French orders.

"The let-down will probably be temporary," said one steel man, "since domestic defense needs should take up the slack."

Climb Continues In Bank Loans

Commercial, industrial and agricultural loans of banks increased last week for the third straight week.

The Federal Reserve Board said that in banks of 101 cities, these loans gained $19,000,000 to a total of $4,387,000,000 in the week ended June 19. This put the total in these cities $584,000,000 higher than a year ago.

Last week, Chicago district banks alone increased their commercial, industrial and agricultural loans $12,000,000, but small decreases occurred in some other areas.

Home Building In Area Rises 33 Pct. in May

D. C. Spurt Contrasts With National Gain Of 9 Pct. Over 1939

By Thomas M. Cahill.

With an advance of 33 per cent last month over valuation for May, 1939, Washington metropolitan area figured prominently in record-breaking residential building activity reported during May for the larger part of the country. This is indicated by E. H. Keefe, Washington sales manager of Dodge Reports, daily construction news service, in commenting yesterday on the general building situation.

"Intensification of the war has not changed the upward trend of American construction," he said, adding. "Three factors might affect the attitude of private interests toward building, but not one of them has happened yet. They are: First, what might be termed a panic causing a general curtailment or abandonment of building projects. Another possibility is a rapid rise in building costs. Finally, governmental control of construction to give priority to preparedness projects would have obvious results. It must be repeated that none of these things has happened."

Mr. Keefe continued by stating that the May record of construction performance in the 37 States east of the Rocky Mountains was 7 per cent better than in that month of 1939. Explaining that residential building is always a good indicator, Mr. Keefe said the contract total for May in the 37-State area was the highest since August, 1929, and included a 9 per cent gain over the figure for May, last year. In that connection it was noted, particularly, that the gains in contract volume continued throughout the month with no change of rate after the German invasion of Holland, Belgium and France.

Residential building contracts awarded for work in the Washington metropolitan area reached $7,410,000 in May, according to the Dodge survey. This was 33 per cent ahead of the corresponding 1939 valuation of $5,569,000. The average gain recorded for the 37 States was 9 per cent. Work and materials called for in the residential construction contracts awarded throughout the local area during January-through-May have a cumulative value of $24,704,000.

Mr. Keefe concluded by saying "the facts as they are known at this time lead us to believe that the private construction upswing will continue throughout the rest of the year. However, in this fast-moving era, new facts could change the picture with little or no advance notice. It is expected that the national defense program will include a large volume of emergency housing in addition to Army, Navy and industrial construction."

Reading Railroad

The Reading Railroad reported a net railway operating income for May $1,048,229, an increase of $87,170. The income for the five months ending May 31 was $4,833,731, an increase of $38,954.

Swede Bank Acquires U. S. Firm in Holland

By the Associated Press

A Dutch concern sold its controlling interest in the American Bosch Corporation to Swedish interests a little over a month before the German invasion of the Netherlands, the Securities Commission reported yesterday.

The sale of $35,000 shares of $5 par capital stock in the corporation to interests identified with the Stockholm Enskilda Bank was reported by Administratiekantoor voor Internationale Beleggingig, Amsterdam, on April 6.

Price Fixing Laid to Liquor Store Group

By the Associated Press

The Federal Trade Commission announced last night that it had issued a price-fixing complaint against the National Retail Liquor Package Association, Inc., of New York, its officials and members including 29 State or sectional trade associations.

The complaint charges, the commission said, that under a threat of boycott the respondents combined to fix prices, compelled manufacturers, importers and wholesalers not to sell to retailers who cut prices and "spied upon" cut-rate dealers, reporting them to the wholesalers.

"Among alleged results of the respondents' practices," the commission said, "are prevention of price competition, increase of prices to the public and creation of a monopoly in the respondents."

They were given 20 days to reply.

Among the respondents were: Baltimore Retail Liquor Dealers Association, Baltimore; District of Columbia Retail Liquor Dealers Association, Washington.

To Every Investor and Speculator
We Offer this Statement of our Basic Policy

1. Our customer's interest MUST come first. Upon our ability to satisfy him rests our chance to succeed.
2. Our business deals with people and their money. This creates financial and ethical responsibilities which we accept completely.
3. Eliminating all expensive frills which do not make a direct contribution to the fundamental requirements of our customers, we offer simple offices, competent manpower and efficient, impartial service.
4. When our relationship with a customer is other than that of a commission broker, the fact will be made known before the transaction. When supplying printed reports concerning a security in which the firm is not acting as principal, we intend to indicate the extent of the aggregate direct and indirect ownership, as of the date of the report, by the firm and its general partners. The purpose of such disclosure is to help the customer estimate the possibility and extent of bias on the part of the firm in its presentation of facts relating to a particular security.
5. Salaries of our Registered Representatives (Customers' Men) are related primarily to their success in satisfying the service requirements of customers—thus eliminating conditions which indirectly create pressures to increase the trading of customers.
6. We think it is impossible for us to operate successfully as investment counsel. Therefore all reports issued by our Research Department will be limited to facts—absolutely ungarnished with advice.
7. Our partners and managers are available for consultation with all customers, large or small.
8. During periods of extraordinary activity, no new accounts will be opened on any day when the volume of trading at any time indicates that the facilities of the firm may be overtaxed.
9. Our working capital position will at all times exceed the requirements of the law, the New York Stock Exchange and other exchanges, and our financial statements will be issued in a form designed for maximum clarity and understanding.
10. We heartily support the laws and other controls designed to protect the investor by preventing manipulation and fraud.

We have offices in 38 cities, memberships in 27 exchanges, 12,000 miles of leased wires. These facilities represent the mechanics by which we deliver efficient service. If you would like to know more, we suggest that you write for a copy of "A Declaration of Policy".

Williams' Condition 'Very Satisfactory'

Cleveland, June 24 (AP).—Ted Williams is suffering from a concussion but is in "very satisfactory" condition, Dr. Edward Castle reported today. The lanky Red Sox outfielder, who collided with a teammate, Roger Cramer, while chasing a fly in a Sunday game here, spent a good night, Dr. Castle said, but will be confined at least another day. He will be out of the line-up about a week.

Listen! with Slocum

Philadelphia—Commentators and Announcers may be the glamour boys of the radio business but lads who do the work are the Engineers. That rather obvious thought has been simmering between my ears these many moons, but a glimpse of the technicians in action at Philadelphia Convention Hall, where they are now covering the Republican 1940 convention, proves beyond any shadow of doubt that they form a clique.

For instance, there are a thousand delegates and any one of them can make a speech to the entire world if he can get the attention of the chairman and the cooperation of the radio men. He would merely step to the nearest microphone, and there is one every 20 feet or so, and these microphones are all connected with the loud speakers and the control rooms of the major broadcasting systems perched high above the hall. That little set up requires countless thousands of feet of wire, including an unbelievably involved system of wiring. Accordingly nobody would use these floor microphones for anything except voting. There is one placed in front of the chairman of each delegation. When it comes his time to speak he flips a switch and says his bit. These switches have dual control, and any overwrought chairman who wants to talk could not do so by flipping his switch. He would have to get recognition from the chairman first. When this request is granted another switch is turned on, making the delegate's mike alive.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary B. McMillin, and two sons, John McMillin, of New York, and Frank E. McMillin, jr., of Tulsa, Okla.

Va. Mother And 3 Children Found Hanged

By the Associated Press

Norfolk, Va., June 24.—Mrs. Louise Gertrude Sanderlin, 28, and her three small children were found dead today, dangling from ropes in a chicken house on their Norfolk County farm.

Deputy Sheriff Frank Wilson, who reported Coroner L. C. Ferebee had found the deaths resulted from strangulation, said tonight he will swear out four warrants charging C. C. Sanderlin, the 64-year-old husband and father, with murder in each case.

Sanderlin told police he had been ill in bed and last saw his wife at 9:30 a. m., five hours before he said he discovered the bodies. He was jailed "for investigation."

The mother and two older children, Charles C., jr., 7, and Louise, 5½, were hanging from the rafters. Six-month old Joalice was hanging from one end of a rope that was wound about the mother's right arm.

Wilson said his decision was reached on the basis of the coroner's reports after examination of the bodies of Mrs. Sanderlin and one of the children.

He said the throats of the victims were lacerated and that bruises were found on Mrs. Sanderlin's body and that of the child examined.

CCC Ranks Now Open to Boys Outside 'Needy' Classification

Applicants Must Be in Need of Job, Or Training Which Family Is Unable To Provide, Says New Regulation

Boys from families in moderate circumstances but not in need of relief will be considered for enrollment in the Civilian Conservation Corps for the first time next month.

James J. McEntee, CCC director, announced yesterday that Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, had approved a modification of the eligibility regulations governing the selection of young men for the corps to permit such enrollment.

The revised regulations will be in force during the coming July replacement enrollment, when approximately 100,000 young men and war veterans are to fill vacancies caused by the departure of men to accept employment, or because their terms of enrollment had expired.

"Prior to the change in eligibility standards, enrollment in the junior contingent of the CCC was limited to young men whose families were on relief, eligible for relief or whose incomes were below the normal standards of living in the community," McEntee said.

"The revised regulations will make it possible to enroll boys from families in moderate circumstances if the boy is in need of employment and training and his family is unable to give him needed education, job training and vocational opportunities.

"Priority always has been given to young men in the order of need. The same policy will be followed in the July enrollment."

All enrollees whose families have incomes below the normal standard in their community must allot home $22 a month of their cash allowance of $30 a month. Orphans without dependents and boys from families in moderate circumstances will deposit $22 a month with the chief of finance of the U. S. Army, who is CCC fiscal agent. Money saved by enrollees is paid them when they complete their terms of enrollment.

Director McEntee remarked that the CCC was intensifying and improving its "job training and vocational training facilities to give the young men opportunity to acquire skills "useful both in industry and in national defense."

Under the 1941 Relief Bill completed by Congress Saturday, which will go into effect on July 1, the CCC was given permission for the first time to add noncombatant military training to its educational activities.

B. M. Chiperfield, Ex-Congressman, Dies in Illinois

Former Representative Burnett M. Chiperfield, father of Representative Robert B. Chiperfield (Republican) of Illinois, died yesterday at his home at Canton, Ill. He was 70.

The elder Mr. Chiperfield was elected to the Sixty-fourth Congress in 1914. In the World War he served as judge advocate general of the Thirty-third Division, judge advocate general of the Third Army Corps, A. E. F., and officer in charge of civil affairs in occupied Germany. After the war he was judge advocate of Illinois and president of the First National Bank of Canton, and was elected to the Seventy-first and Seventy-second Congresses.

DISPELLING AN ILLUSION

SOMETIMES we wonder if The Homestead's reputation as a luxury hotel hasn't created an erroneous impression of expensiveness which frightens some of our friends.

Has it occurred to you that during the summer season, room and meal charges at this famous resort are no higher than those of the better commercial hotels of your own city?

Ask us for rates and tell us what your sports interests are; then we can give you a comprehensive idea of the cost of a stay at The Homestead. There will be few of the usual "extras," for we pride ourselves upon the utter completeness of our service.
